SENATORS GREETED BY SHOTS

Steel Strike Probers Arrive at Mills as Disorder Breaks Out

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 10.—Just as Senators Kenyon and McKellar of the Steel Strike Investigation Committee, stepped from an automobile at the gates of the Homestead Steel Works today, two shots were fired from a passing street car.

The Senators were rushed into the offices of the plant, while the State constabulary rushed after the car and arrested a number of foreigners. No one was hurt by the shooting.

The shooting occurred when the street car was some distance away from where the Senators' automobile stopped. A number of strikers had boarded the car to try to induce some workers not to go to the plant. During the argument one of the workmen is said to have pulled the gun and shot to scare off the union men.

Alleged to have made offers to plant bombs in the steel plants in this district, John Andrews, thirty-five, of Wellsburg, W. Va., and another man whose name the police refuse to divulge were locked up in the city jail today on charges made by labor leaders. A third arrest is expected.

According to the strikers' leaders the men came to them, and for a sum of money said they would blow up any plant named. They claimed to have dynamite and other explosives in their possession. The offer was rejected and police were notified. The authorities believe the suspects may belong to the group of radicals

GABY, WITH $1,000,000 IN JEWELS, HERE AGAIN

(Copyright, International Film Service.)

Gaby Deslys, fairest of all French dancers, reaches New York on the liner La France, to dance in America. Her jewels include a very valuable pair of diamond studded garters. She wants to marry, settle down and raise children.

New York, Oct. 10.—Gaby Deslys, bringing about $1,000,000 worth of jewels, included among which was the pearl necklace which King Manuel of Portugal gave her some years ago, arrived here on the French liner France. Gaby wore a stunning fur gown and a pair of diamond garters—that is, she said she had on the garters.

Devoted attention was paid to the dancer on the voyage by the Duke De Crussel, twenty-four, a French war veteran, whose mother, the Duchess D'Uzes, was reported to have taken swift passage in another steamer when she learned her son and Gaby were en route for America on the same vessel.

The Duke smiled when asked if his mother was pursuing him, and admitted that he expects to meet her in America shortly.

Gaby sidestepped all questions regarding the Duke, but said, when asked if she plans to be married here: "I am not going to marry while I am on the stage, and will not marry an actor unless he can support me. The man I marry must be able to provide amply for me, as I want to settle down and have babies."

Trafficking in Girls Opposed in Treaty Reservaton

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 10. — The League of Nations would be put on record as opposing trafficking of women and children, under the terms of a reservation to the peace treaty introduced in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Curtis of Kansas.

The reservation provides that the United States contrues subdivision C, article 23, of the peace treaty to mean that the League of Nations refuses to recognise agreements for trafficking in women and children, and will use its influence against such traffic.

Employers at Industrial Conference Declare Against "Closed Shop"

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 10.—The employers' group in President Wilson's Industrial Conference, headed by Harris A. Wheeler, a Chicago banker, submitted to the conference today a "platform of principles," which the employing interests of the country consider vital in governing the relationships that must exist between capital and labor.

Chief among the principles set forth was that the "open shop" must be maintained throughout the nation. In that part of the platform was this significant statement:

"No employer should be required to deal with men or groups of men who are not his employes or chosen by and from among them."

This was generally interpreted as in direct opposition to the principle of international trades unionism and the settlement of disputes by international officers. The platform held rigidly to the principle that "outsiders" have not the right to interfere in the relations of employer and employe.

TO SETTLE DISPUTES.

Regarding the settlement of industrial disputes the employers said:

"Each establishment should provide adequate means for the discussion of all questions and the just and

D. C. POLICE RENOUNCE A. F. OF L.

Washington Union Votes to Return Charter Granted by Federation

Washington, Oct. 10.—By a vote of 84 to 21, the Washington Policemen's Union today was on record in favor of returning its charter recently granted by the American Federation of Labor.

C. A. Strobey, president of the union, explained that the vote was taken to demonstrate the appreciation Washington policemen feel towards Congress because of the recommendation for increases in their salaries.

Officials of the union said the opposition of District officials to the policemen affiliating with organized labor had nothing to do with the vote to return the charter.

Several members of the police union declared they favored continuing their alliance with the A. F. of L. and desired to leave to the courts the question whether they have a right to affiliate. They were overruled, however.

POLICE FIRE SHOTS AT CHELSEA BURGLARS

Following an exciting chase in which the police fired several shots, two young men who attempted to break into the clothing store of M. Wolper, Cherry street, Chelsea, escaped by scaling a fence in the rear of the establishment today. Patrolman George Finn and John Keating, standing at Broadway and Everett street, heard the burglar alarm ring in the store. They rushed to the scene, arriving in time to see two young men disappearing over a high board fence.

21 Forced Out of Air Race

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Reports from all central stations early this afternoon show that sixteen of the westbound and five of the eastbound craft in the cross-country air race have been "downed" for various reasons. Four persons had lost their lives in connection with the contest.

There are now thirty-three machines in the contest.

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 10. — First Lieutenant E. V. Wales, a Western contestant in the trans-continental air race, was killed at Deer Mountain, Wyoming, late yesterday, and Lieutenant William Goldsborough, who accompanied Wales, as a passenger, was injured, said a dispatch received at the American Flying Club today.

Wales and Goldsborough were caught in a snow storm, and while blinded crashed into the top of the mountain. The machine rolled down the mountainside into a deep snow-drift.

Goldsborough, although badly hurt, crawled several miles to the Paulson ranch for aid.

Searchers went back and found Wales, but he was dead before they arrived.

Wales and Goldsborough were using a De Havilland 4 machine, driven by a 400-horsepower Liberty motor.

News of the tragic accident was re

13 ALLEGED PICKETS IN STEEL STRIKE RIOT

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Thirteen alleged union pickets, part of a mob that gathered at the gates of the plant of the Illinois Steel Company in South Chicago today, were arrested after a deputy sheriff had been beaten and severely injured and shots had been fired.

REOPENS WAR IN BALTIC

Paris, Oct. 10.—The blockade of Germany resulting from the refusal of General von Der Goltz to withdraw his troops from the Baltic provinces will be put into effect at once.

The Supreme Council today directed the reparations commission immediately to put pressure upon Germany to prevent raw materials from entering the country until the dispute involving the Baltic district is settled.

A new note to Germany was tentatively appdoved and may be sent to Berlin tonight. The council was informed that despite denials, von der Goltz has been receiving supplies from Prussia and that his forces have been streghtened by officers recruited through the German war office.

ceived from the control station at Rollins, Wyoming. Wales and Goldsborough had arrived there Thursday morning and departed a few hours later.

Rollins had been substituted as a control station for Green River, on account of a heavy fall of snow at the latter place.

WALES WAS ENGAGED.

Wales was twenty-seven years old and unmarried, although his friends understood that he was engaged. He lived in Santa Barbara, Cal., and before the war was a moving picture director for the American Film Company. He entered the University of California Flying School when the United States entered the war and was afterwards attached to the intelligence department of the American Air Service.

Two more of the east-bound machines were compelled to drop out of the race because of Wyoming snowstorms. They were 54, piloted by Second Lieutenant S. E. Rice, and 53, piloted by Cadet A. J. Nassamer. No. 54 quit sixty miles west of Battle Mountain and No. 53 dropped out twelve miles west of the same mountain. Both made forced landings.

A dispatch from Cleveland, Ohio, said that Lieutenant-Colonel H. E. Hartney, the oldest flier in the race, left there at 6:21 this morning westward bound. He is flying a Fokker plane.

TWO MORE ARE DOWNED.

Rockwell plane No. 55, flying east from San Francisco, was compelled to land fifteen miles south of Bitter Creek, Wyoming. This machine is piloted by Second Lieutenant Spender Hall and carried First Lieutenant William Bevan as a passenger.

Mather plane No. 59 was reported to have dropped out of the race at Salt Lake. It was flying east, piloted by First Lieutenant Robert Kauch, who carried Second Lieutenant Warren A. Maxwell as a passenger.

It is reported that Lieutenant B. W. Maynard, who is leading by a big margin, might be barred because he had flown into Cheyenne, Wyo., a few minutes after sundown on Thursday night, but after a long distance conversation with officials at Washington it was announced by the American Flying Club that Maynard was still in the race.

Flying after sunset was regarded as too much of a technicality to bar the famous flyer. It was stated that the only thing which might result in an airman being put out of the contest would be his failure to circle a flying field twice before making a landing.

"Flying Parson" Leads Big Race; Nearest Contestant Leaves Omaha for East

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct 10.—Strung out like gigantic wild ducks across the broad expanse of the Central United States army aviators today are dashing toward both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts in the greatest air race in history. It is possible that one or more entrants in the transcontinental derby may reach the end of the flight today.

"Lieutenant Maynard was delayed in Cheyenne, the radiator of his machine being damaged. He spent the morning there making repairs.

Captain Lowell H. Smith, flying eastward, took the air at Omaha, Neb., shortly after dawn today and expects to be within reach of the Eastern end of the flight by nightfall.

Captain Smith and Lieutenant Maynard passed each other near North Platte, Neb., late yesterday afternoon.

It took Maynard, the "parson aviator," thirteen hours' actual flying time to cover the 1,696-mile stretch from Mineola, N. Y., to Cheyenne. He travelled 886 miles yesterday.

Captain Smith after battling with three mountain snow storms, achieved 852 miles yesterday, making his total distance 1,460 miles.

Of the westbound fliers, Maynard is far in the lead, although Captain H. C. Drayton, who started from Des Moines, Ia., this morning, is making a valiant fight to overtake him.

Major Carl Spatz and Lieutenant E. C. Kiel of the eastbound squad left North Platte, Neb., this morning, and are pressing hard on the heels of Captain Smith.

Four of the westbound fliers took off from Chicago early today. They are Captain J. C. Donaldson, Lieutenant Alexander Pierson, Major Harry Smith and Lieutenant E. M. Menzelman.

Colonel Miller Thrown Into Rear Seat of Auto, Spine Badly Wrenched

New York, Oct 10.—Colonel Archie Miller, commander of the Army Air Service on Long Island, and one of the directors of the trans-continental flight, was injured today when his automobile struck a deep rut in the road while on his way to Mineola. At the Mitchel Hospital it was said that his spine was wrenched. Colonel Miller was in the front seat and was thrown into the rear seat.

who were driven out of Weirton, W. Va., early this week.

There was almost a reign of terror in Donora last night. Two men were shot and attempts were made to burn the homes of loyal employes. Papers were piled up and set on fire at two houses. Little damage resulted.

Columbus Beall, one of the negroes who was attacked in yesterday's riot at Donora, was shot but not seriously hurt when attacked later. Marie Steelo, an employe in one of the steel company offices, was attacked by several foreigners and injured. Four workers leaving one of the plants was attacked by fifty men. During the fight Mike Kellich was shot. The State police made sixteen arrests.

The State constabulary was called to stop a fight in a foreigner's boarding house in Clairton today, when several of the men said they would return to work. Shots were fired and knives were drawn during the melee. One man, Andrew Chekok, was slightly wounded by a bullet and three others were cut and bruised in the melee. A number of the men were arrested.

PROBERS VISIT MILLS.

The Senatorial probers who arrived today were Chairman Kenyon of Iowa, Phipps of Colorado, McKellar of Tennessee and Sterling of South Dakota. Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, a member of the committee, could not leave Washington last night and was expected to arrive tonight.

Immediately after breakfast the members started for the mill sections, where they said they would get a close-up view of conditions. Today's investigation, they said, would be informal and unofficial. The largest mill centres were visited. A stenographer accompanied the party, it being the intention to take testimony in the mills visited.

Although no definite program had been mapped out for their visit here, which will last until Sunday night, the Senators said they probably would hold hearings here. They expected to go to Youngstown, O., on Monday.

"We came here to make a quiet investigation," said Chairman Kenyon. He made it plain that the party did not wish to be bothered by strike officials, steel officials "or anybody else. "We will make the investigation alone," he said.

"We expect to obtain important information here and will thoroughly investigate every angle of the strike," said Senator Phipps. "We are here to find out what caused the strike and to ascertain the true working conditions in the mills. No definite program has been mapped out, but no doubt we will hold some hearings before returning to Washington."

BOTH SIDES READY.

Both sides to the strike professed today to be ready for the investigation. The strike leaders intend to make the presence of the Senators the occasion for the institution of legal actions in both the State and Federal courts in the hope of getting the ban on meetings lifted.

Attorney W. B. Rubin, who is handling the legal end of the strikers' case, said the suits had been prepared, but he would not say what form they would take.

The operators said they would extend every assistance to the probers. The mills were thrown open for inspection and the Senators could talk with workmen if they wished.

Steady gains were reported by the steel operators today. More blast furnaces were started and new mills were placed in operation. Despite these claims the strikers' leaders say they have drawn several hundred more men from plants and that the operators are facing a crisis at several points.

BRITISH TROOPS PUT DOWN SOLDIERS' RIOT

Plymouth, England, Oct. 10.—British soldiers just returned from Russia engaged in a drunken orgy of fighting here. Troops were called out and a veritable battle ensued. The rioters barricaded themselves in houses and later secured the barracks, where they were surrounded, however, by troops with fixed bayonets.

London, Oct. 10.—It is now believed impossible to hold the first meeting of the League of Nations at Washington in November as planned. The general opinion is that the session will have to be postponed at least until January.

PRESIDENT IS TAKING MORE FOOD

Has Another Restful Night and Condition Continues to Improve

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 10.—"The President had another restful night. His condition has continued to improve and he is now taking as much food and of as great variety as we desire."

This was the bulletin issued today from the White House by Rear-Admirals E. R. Stitt and Cary T. Grayson, and Dr. Sterling Ruffin.

President Wilson's condition is becoming so favorable that Rear-Admiral Grayson will soon discontinue his daily bulletins on the President's condition, it is reported at the White House.

The discontinuance of bulletins is expected to come after a conference tomorrow between the physicians daily attending the President and Dr. F. X. Dercum, noted neurologist of Philadelphia, unless there is an unlooked for change for the worse in the President's condition.

DELUGE OF LETTERS COMMENDING COOLIDGE

Twenty-two hundred letters, telegrams and communications commending Governor Coolidge's stand in the police strike have been received at the State House. Replying to these has kept several stenographers and Henry F. Long, the Governor's secretary, exceedingly busy, but all have been answered, including the morning's batch of mail.

prompt settlement of all disputes that arise between management and men in the course of industrial operation, but there should be no improper limitation or impairment of the exercise by management of its essential function of judgment and discretion."

The employers also failed to take cognizance of labor's demands for an eight-hour day.

"Hours of work schedules," the platform states, "should be fixed at the point consistent with the health of the worker and his right to an adequate period of leisure for rest, recreation, home life and self development. To the extent that the work schedule is shortened beyond this point the worker as well as the community must inevitably pay in a reduced standard of living. The standard of the work schedule should be the week, varying as the peculiar requirements of individual industries may demand. Overtime should be avoided, and one day of rest in seven be provided."

SCORES SYMPATHY STRIKE.

The right of workers to organize and strike is recognized in private industry, but the sympathetic strike was condemned as "indefensible, anti-social and immoral." Strikes of the government employes cannot be tolerated. A summary of the employers' platform follows:

"Sound industrial development must have as its foundation productive efficiency, and high productive efficiency requires not only energy, loyalty and intelligence on the part of the management and the men, but sincere co-operation in the employment relation based upon mutual confidence and sympathy.

"With full recognition of the vital importance of these conditions and with due realization of the great responsibility resting upon management to secure their practical application in industrial affairs, we submit the following principles which we regard as fundamentally sound in the interest of industry, of those employed or concerned in industry and of the people as a whole.

TO INCREASE PRODUCTION.

"There should be no intentional restriction of productive effort or output by either the employer or the employe to create an artificial scarcity of the product or of labor in order to increase prices of wages, nor should there be any waste of the productive capacity of industry through the employment of unnecessary labor or inefficient management.

"Each establishment should develop contact and full opportunity for interchange of views between management and men, through individual or collective dealing or a combination of both or by some other effective method, always predicated on both sides on honesty of purpose, fairness of attitude and due recognition of the joint interest and obligation in the common enterprise in which they are engaged.

"It is the duty of the management to make certain that the conditions under which work is carried on are as safe and as satisfactory to the workers as the nature of the business reasonably permits. Every effort should be made to maintain steady employment of the workers, both on their account and to increase efficiency. Each establishment should study carefully the causes of unemployment and individually and in co-operation with other establishments in the same and other industries should endeavor to determine and to maintain conditions and business methods which will result in the greatest possible stability in the employment relation.

ADJOURNS TILL TUESDAY.

The conference was forced to adjourn today until Tuesday. So many resolutions and plans for curing the economic and industrial unrest have been submitted that the committee of fifteen has been unable to formulate a report on any of them. Without this report the conference can take no action. Thomas L. Chadbourne, its chairman, announced the committee would meet on Monday morning.

Wide differences of opinion on practically all the questions involved are held by members of the committee. One of the snags which has held up its work is the labor resolution calling for a settlement of the national steel strike by a committee of six from the conference. Heated debates already have been held behind closed doors on this question but nothing like a decision has been reached.

Burlen Warns Voters About Postcard Notices

Voters are warned to ignore postcards from political headquarters informing them their names are not on the voting lists. The warning was issued today by M. W. Burlen, head of the Boston Election Board.

"Thousands are receiving such postcards," said Mr. Burlen. "I advise they pay no attention to them unless from the election commissioners' office. Men come here and stand in line for a long time and when they find their names are on the list they blame us. I have had many letters because of these postcard notices from political headquarters and much extra and unnecessary work for the clerks of this department has resulted."

Mr. Burlen also stated that several voting lists at precincts have been defaced of late and declares if information can be obtained against the persons responsible prosecutions will follow. Even the brass fixtures holding the lists together have been removed by thieves.

TWO MEN SHOT IN OHIO STEEL STRIKE RIOT

By International News Service.

Youngstown, O., Oct. 10.—Two Rumanians were shot and several other men were severely beaten in a battle between negro workmen and steel strikers and their sympathizers at Hubbard, near here, early today.

The Rumanians were removed to a hospital in a serious condition. The negroes were set upon by the crowd when they left the plant of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company, and were being badly used up when one of them is alleged to have pulled a gun and fired at the attackers.

A large squad of deputies answered the riot call and the mob was soon scattered. Several arrests were made. The negroes were cleaning up the plant in preparation for a resumption of work.

The plant of the Trumbull Steel Company at Warren, which was the first to resume in the Mahoning valley, was operating only partially today. Only 1,000 of the 5,000 workers responded for duty.

HUGE EXPORTS OF SUGAR WHILE BOSTON PEOPLE SUFFER BY SCARCITY

COST MAY SOAR TO 30 CENTS

Worst Shortage Ever Known Is Predicted for First of the Year

With sugar at 30 cents a pound predicted, housewives unable to buy enough for household needs, and the worst shortage ever known predicted for the first of the year, Boston exporters are sending huge lots of sugar abroad.

Sugar imports into Boston for the month of September far exceeded the tonnage of any previous month of this year and were nearly three times as great as for the month of September, 1918, 76,377,280 pounds of sugar being received in Boston during that time, according to figures obtained today at the Department of Marine, Customs House.

HOARDING CHARGED.

Big Boston distributors give as one reason for the continued shortage the fact that housewives are hoarding and that big candy manufacturers are laying in stocks for the Winter.

But housewives known to the American are worrying about where they can buy sugar. One of the largest grocery firms of the city was unable to furnish regular customers recently with sugar. Another leading grocer could sell but one pound at a time.

A big chain store group sells but one pound with every dollar's worth of purchases. It refuses, however, to sell five pounds with five dollars' worth because of the shortage.

Tons and tons of sugar are being withheld from the market by speculators waiting for a rising market, is the charge openly made among big sugar buyers.

And with the sugar shortage especially in some of the country towns really menacing, the American obtained figures today showing that there are millions of pounds of sugar somewhere in Boston. Where it is, who has it and who is holding it for speculation, no one seems to know. Despite the fact that the Lever act, still on the statute books, prohibits hoarding food, Federal officials in Boston are inactive and the sugar shortage increases daily.

Last month's figures included 72,723,840 pounds of Cuban sugar and 3,653,440 pounds from Porto Rico. For the month of September, 1918, 28,412,511 pounds was the total imports to the city. This sugar was all imported from Cuba, with no sugar from Porto Rico during the month.

IMPORTS GREATLY INCREASED.

The imports into the city for the last three months previous to September were: June, 40,147,002; July, 31,363,617, and August, 35,339,240 pounds. The imports for these months are all consignments from Cuba, no figures from Porto Rico being available.

The exports for the same period of 1919, including September, are: June, 2,240,114 pounds to England; 500,000 to Scotland; July, 2,260,000 pounds to France; 39,600 pounds to England; August exports, approximately, 5,000,000 pounds; September, 4,785,625 pounds to France.

The imports into Boston for the past four months of 1919 without the figures from Porto Rico for June, July and August, totals 183,126,139 pounds. The exports for the month total 14,874,735 pounds. Deducting the exports from the imports for the four months gives a total of 168,251,404 pounds of sugar that remained in the city.

Imports of 76,377,280 pounds for the month of September, less the exports of 4,785,625 pounds, leaves a total of 71,591,655 pounds that remained in the city.

DEALERS BLAME HOARDERS.

Big Boston sugar distributers advance several reasons for the continued shortage. Most prominent among the reasons is the hoarding by housewives and by the big candy manufacturers.

Other causes for the continued shortage are the increase in imports to foreign countries, the limitation set by the Equalization Board and last, but not least, the fact that many tons of sugar are being held in speculative hands awaiting a higher market.

And the higher market is believed to be in sight by the Boston refiners, who assert that if the Equalization Board carries out its present intention of discontinuing activities December 31, sugar will reach thirty cents a pound, if not more.

Cablegrams received by a big Boston sugar dealer from Cuba stated that the present crop in that section was estimated at 4,250,000 tons. Of this amount, one-quarter has already been purchased on foreign order.

Unless the present supply of sugar can be stretched until December 31, at which time the new crop is harvested, the Boston refiners predict a sugar shortage even greater than any yet experienced.

In a word, Boston dealers are of the opinion that the sugar shortage has not reached its worst yet, and that before conditions improve they will be a lot worse.

PREDICTS FURTHER SHORTAGE.

Charles E. Van Wart, president of the Eastern Sugar and Products Company, said:

"Every bit of the sugar that arrived in Boston during the month of September has already been consumed. The demand was greater than the supply, as would have been the case if twice as much sugar had been received.

Asked the cause of the continued sugar shortage, Mr. Van Wart said: "The main source of trouble comes direct from the housewives and one word, hoarding, explains the whole situation. I know of thousands of cases where the pantry is full, and still the housewife goes to the store every day for her two pounds. Take into consideration the number of families in Greater Boston and knowing as we do that each of them is getting at least two pounds of sugar a day, we know where the supply is going. Secondly, the heavy exports result in the continuation of the shortage.

CUT REFINERS' SUPPLY.

"An important cause is the recent action taken by the Equalization Board when they cut the supply of the refineries 25 per cent. With the refineries cut 25 per cent. there can only be one result—the consumer must be cut 25 per cent. as well."

Officials of the Central Aguirre Sugar Company, with offices at No. 84 State street, stated that they have received no sugar in Boston during the present year, that all their sugar shipments which have been controlled by the government have been sent to ports in the South and therefore they were unable to comment on the situation.

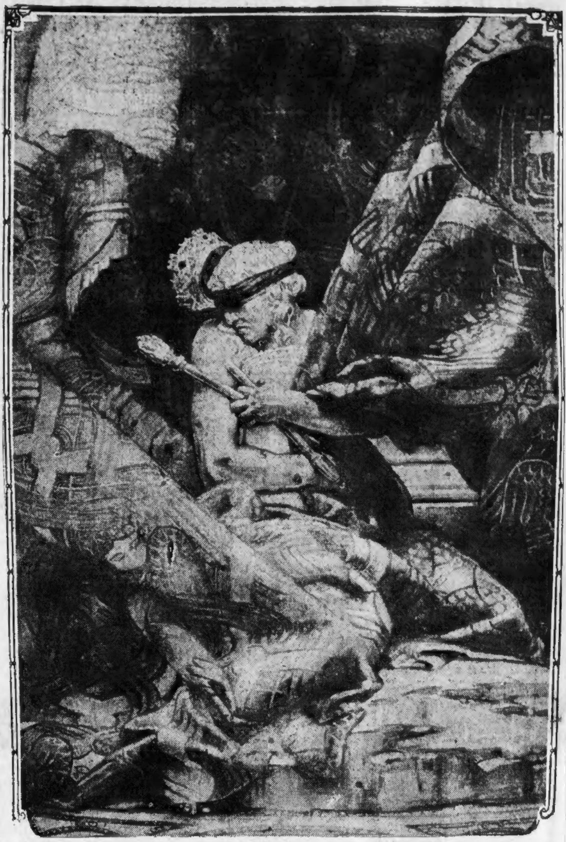
DENY SARGENT PICTURE INSULTS JEWS



Public library trustees take issue with Jewish critics that Sargent's painting, "The Synagogue," a photograph of which is here presented, is insulting or slurring to the Hebrew race. They point out that the picture is symbolical and is in harmony with the rules of art as pictured in Europe for centuries. Photograph copyrighted by trustees of the Boston Public Library.

"It's just a tempest in a teapot, nothing more."

This was the comment of a clergyman, who is a trustee of the Public Library, upon the criticism of Sargent's "Synagogue." "Nobody meant any slur on our Jewish citizens. To take offense where no offense was meant, seems to be wearing a chip on one's shoulder."

It was after Louis E. Kirstein and William F. Kenney, both trustees of the library, had refused to talk that the third trustee spoke his mind as to the Sargent painting, "The Synagogue," which Rabbi H. M. Eichler characterized as unpleasant and not typical of the Jew.

It was also after Willard B. Savary had added his comment that the picture was a "flagrant public insult," that the explanation was made.

WHAT THE PICTURE MEANS.

"The picture is historical," said the clergyman. "In the painting, the sceptre which is held in the hand of the woman representing the synagogue, is broken. Her crown is falling from her head. Now this, by all the canons of history, means the passing of temporal power from the Jewish state long years ago. It means the passing of theocracy. There had been a time in the history of the Jews when the kingly power and the religious power were one and the same, vested in king priests. Then power became divided. And the two separated. The picture shows the passing.

"Rabbi Eichler has said that he did not consider the figure in the picture Jewish. He would have preferred an old man. However this may be, we all know that by every canon of art, the Synagogue is represented as a woman.

NO SLUR INTENDED.

"In the Cathedral of Notre Dame at Paris, at Rheims, at Strasburg, and at Bordeaux, in cathedrals of each of these cities, the history of religion is treated chronologically, in paintings, as Sargent has treated it, and the woman, with the falling crown and broken sceptre; even the woman with the blindfolded eyes, is depicted.

"But I wish to emphasize that no slur was intended to the Jew. The idea, in our democracy, is preposterous. It rather was meant, as symbolists of the Middle Ages meant it to mean, that the day of the Old Testament had passed. Do we not read in the Old Testament of the rending of the veil of the tabernacle? And is not this shown in the picture? The whole question is apart from trifling issues of modern today. It is embedded in the history of the race and the long ages.

"To take offense, is to travel too far afield, where the idea, I know, was never even dreamed of by Sargent, the painter."

SAME IDEA USED BEFORE.

Officials at the Public Library agreed with the clergyman trustee. As they explained:

"The concept has been used many times before, the woman representing the Synagogue being old and blindfolded, with broken sceptre and falling crown. It has been used mostly in European cities where the Jew was a large part of the population, and where they never dreamed of taking offense. The thing is not modern, of Boston of 1919. It is of an epoch of the middle ages.

"Sargent, over twenty years ago, was commissioned to paint the history of religion. He painted it, borrowing what he wished from the symbolism of history, and adding to it part and parcel of his spirit and his genius. To consider this painting as anything but history and art and symbolism, would be to judge crassly, and to leap at affront.

"The idea of insult never occurred, we are sure, to any of the trustees or to the painter. Is it not, perhaps, laying too much stress on a matter which is art and nothing beside?"

The Rev. Alexander H. Mann and Samuel Carr, trustees of the Library, could not be reached, as both are out of the city.

Calls Taft "Fatty Arbuckle" of U. S. Politics

Washington, Oct. 10.—Former President Taft was characterized as the "Fatty Arbuckle of American politics" in the House.

Representative Williams, Republican of Illinois, who gave him the soubriquet, also charged the former President with being an assistant Democrat and a "wet nurse" for the League of Nations.

"He has never in his life been a real Republican," Mr. Williams declared.

The attack on Mr. Taft was made during the brief debate on the bill to repeal the Canadian reciprocity act, which the ex-President was charged with having forced through Congress "by main strength and awkwardness."

The bill repealing the reciprocity act was passed without a record vote, most of the Democrats joining with the Republicans in supporting it.

NEW BEDFORD MILL STRIKERS RETURN

New Bedford, Oct. 10.—Spinners and doffers employed in the Passaic mill who have been out on strike, have returned to work, having voted to accept the terms offered by the mill officials. The plan adopted provides for a "fall-back" scale of $31.55 a week for the spinners and $28.05 for the doffers, providing they work 57½ hours a week. In addition the men will make through piece work up to $36 a week for spinning and $32 for doffing.

The legion has appointed a committee including Dr. G. L. Chase, Lawrence F. O'Toole, Harry Shaughnessy, Maurice Heinritz and Harry Shaughnessy to take charge.

MAID TELLS OF FINDING LOST LUCKY COIN

Picked It Up on Path at the Mitchell Home; Denies She Stole It

Mrs. Esther Zachorne, former maid in the home of Mrs. William A. Mitchell of No. 50 Waban road, Chestnut Hill, too the stand in her own defence in Newton court today and denied in full charges of jewelry thefts made against her and her husband by Mrs. Mitchell. The husband, John Zachorne, was a chauffeur for the Mitchell family.

Mrs. Mitchell, wife of a wealthy shoe manufacturer, has stated that valuables worth $38,000 have been spirited away by somebody in her household within a few months.

The mystic "charm" quarter which has figured so prominently in the case was brought in again. Mrs. Zachorne testified that she and her husband found it on the path outside the Mitchell home last Easter Sunday.

The prosecution has emphasized the importance of the marked coin as evidence that the Zachornes were stealing from their mistress.

WAS CALLED A "TOOL."

The former maid, in a clear voice, declared her innocence, and intimated that her mistress had not suspected her at first. "You are a foolish girl. You are being used as a tool by your husband," she said Mrs. Mitchell told her when she was arrested.

Mrs. Zachorne said Mrs. Mitchell told her that dictaphones were installed in the house after the jewelry theft. Her mistress did not tell her, however, that one of these dictaphones was in the Zachorne's room, and she and her husband found it secreted there one night.

She said that Mrs. Mitchell, before her arrest, told her that if she would confess, and return the valuables, she would get off lightly.

Mrs. Zachorne said the first she knew of the loss of the jewels was when Mrs. Mitchell called her upstairs and said "my jewels are gone." The next day Mrs. Mitchell said she was having the jewels traced. She told me "I have found a glove near the bureau." She said that the glove belonged to somebody in the house, that it was a man's glove, Mrs. Zachorne continued.

"On the Wednesday morning following the loss of the jewels Mrs. Mitchell was in the kitchen and told me they had a clue as to the whereabouts of the jewels. She told me that she had employed the best detectives to trace John's and my history. She told me of a $200 reward that had been offered."

"Mrs. Mitchell then said to me, 'Isn't it better for the person, or the ones who stole the jewels, to return them, in preference to spending fifteen years behind bars?'

"Mrs. Mitchell said this in such a way that I believed she thought I took the jewels, and I went to the kitchen and cried. Mrs. Mitchell told me when she came in the kitchen and found me crying that I was a foolish girl to feel that way and that from the minute the jewels had been stolen she thought it was John who took them.

SPOKE OF ACCOMPLICE.

Q.—"What next? A.—"Mrs. Mitchell told me that she thought the theft of the jewels lay between John and another person. There was nothing further said until my arrest. At that time Mrs. Mitchell said: 'You took my jewels. I thought it was John, but it was you. You are a fool and a tool for John. You have no brains. John has brains and is using you at will.'

Q.—What was the next development? A.—Mrs. Mitchell told me she had dictaphones installed in her house—two in the pantry and two in the cellar.

Q.—Did you know they were in the house? A.—Yes, I had discovered one in my room. It was on the wall, near the head of John's bed, with wires leading to Mrs. Mitchell's room. Mrs. Mitchell asked me to come and see the one in the pantry and those in the cellar.

Q.—Had she told you at the time, there was one in your room? A.—No.

Q.—At what time of the night did Mrs. Mitchel tell you that you were going to be arrested? A.—At about 7 o'clock.

TALKED TO EACH OTHER.

Q.—Tell us, if you will, what happened then? A.—I went upstairs and Mrs. Mitchell followed me. She showed me the workings ow the dictaphone. She said, "You go in your room, Esther, and I will go in yours and talk, and you will see how easy it is for us to have heard anything that you and John might have said."

Q.—Did you? A.—Yes, and I could hear everything.

ASKED TO CONFESS.

Q.—Did Mrs. Mitchell ever ask you where the jewels were? Did she ever say to you that it was much better for you to tell where they were, and, that if you would tell where they were that it would make it easier for you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Go on from there, relative to the proceedings just previous to your arrest. A.—I started to dress, awaiting the arrival of the police. Then Inspector Good, Mr. Shaunessey and Mrs. Mitchell came into my room. I was in my shirtwaist and petticoat. The policeman said to me, "open that trunk." I did, and the first thing he took out was an old, discarded box.

NEW BEDFORD LABORERS GET 25 CENTS A DAY RAISE

New Bedford, Oct. 10.—Laborers employed by the street department here will get a raise of 25 cents a day, beginning November 1, as a result of a vote passed by the Board of Aldermen. The men are now getting from $3.50 to $3.75 a day.

Records Show Crime Increase During Police Strike

Despite the denials of police officials, crime in Boston has increased to a considerable extent since the walkout of patrolmen, according to information furnished the American today.

Although the figures are withheld at police headquarters, it is understood that reports of house-breaking, robbery, pocket-picking and other crimes have been growing more frequent since the first week of the strike.

The police officials maintain that crime has been on the decrease since the arrival of the State Guardsmen. In contrast to this statement are reports of houses entered, business establishments looted and persons assaulted and robbed night and day.

The police admitted that during the month of September there was an increase of 160 arrests for crimes of all kinds over August. They declared, however, that 125 of these represented arrests for gaming, made when the guardsmen rounded up crapshooters. Another gain of forty-five arrests for breaking and entering is attributed to the round-up of looters the first and second nights of the strike.

Arrests for assault and battery were ninety four less in September than in August. Arrests for larceny increased but seventeen.

Despite the statements of officials it is known that a daily increasing number of citizens visit headquarters to report losses by theft, and in some cases to look over the Rogues' Gallery in an effort to identify assailants.

In certain sections, residents report that the guardsmen are becoming more and more lax in their patrol work. Considerable comment has also been heard on the fraternization of guardsmen with citizens, particularly young women. It is maintained that second-story men take advantage of this carelessness.

The epidemic of automobile stealing has assumed such dimensions that practically everyone is aware of it. On the first night of the strike more than twenty machines were reported stolen. Figures for the time since then are not available, but it is known that on one night within a week twelve automobiles were lost in one section of Dorchester alone.

River pirates have also been active, and yachtsmen of South Boston and Dorchester have suffered considerably from their depredations. As far as can be learned no arrests have been made in this connection.

Return Police to Duty, Urges Professor Laski of Harvard's Faculty

Former members of the Boston police department, who walked out on September 9, should be reinstated, according to Professor Harold J. Laski, lecturer on history and government at Harvard.

In an interview Professor Laski declared that their demands were justified, as shown by the fact that new men are being taken on the force under an agreement that fulfills practically all the strikers' requirements.

"The main thing to be done," said the professor, "is to use the recognized means of conciliation to effect a compromise that will at least partially satisfy both sides. The strike has developed so that at present the issue is largely one of prestige and the original issue has been forgotten. The Mayor's committee and the Mayor himself have both admitted that improvements must be affected in the living quarters, length of work and pay of the police force.

"In the army it is the duty of the officers to watch out for the comfort of the men under them; in the police force the officers have ignored the question of satisfaction among the men with their work and their surroundings.

"That the demands of the striking policemen were justified is shown by the fact that new men are being taken on the force under an agreement which fulfills practically all the strikers' requirements.

"The best thing that can be done now is to take these improvements as a basis for negotiation and to see if the reinstatement of the men will not act as a curative for the atmosphere of ill-feeling that now exists on both sides."

SALVATION ARMY GIRL DRAGGED HALF A MILE

Suspended by Feet, Head and Shoulders Resting on Ground, as Horse Bolts

Three uniformed Salvation Army workers, two of them women, were thrown from the wagon in which they were riding today in Somerville when the horse took fright and ran away. Miss Hettie Rowe, twenty-three, of No. 16 Warren avenue, was dragged a half a mile on her head and shoulders, her feet having caught in the traces as she was thrown from her seat. Miss Emily Parsons, forty-two, of the same address, and Frank W. Hunt of No. 27B Summer street, Somerville, the other occupants of the vehicle, received less serious injuries.

The party had started to procure vegetables for a harvest dinner in the Salvation Army headquarters in Somerville. When near Granite street, on Somerville avenue, the horse became frightened.

Hunt, who was driving, was thrown out. Miss Parsons was hurled and partially jumped a few minutes later. Miss Rowe then endeavored to reach the reins and bring the animal to a halt. She was thrown out of the wagon, her feet catching in the harness and her body dragged on the ground near the animal's feet.

The women were removed to their homes.

LIQUOR DEALERS RUSH TO RENEW LICENSES IN N. Y.

New York, Oct. 10.—If the liquor license bureau here may be taken as a barometer, New York is going to to be one very wet dry little town either despite or because of prohibition.

Liquor dealers are simply swamping the place with requests for renewals or brand new licenses. Thousands have been issued in every borough of the city.

MAN INJURED WHEN AUTO DROPS ON HIM

New Bedford, Oct. 10.—While Warren King, of No. 451 Rivet street, was underneath his touring car making repairs, a jack slipped out and the machine, weighing more than a ton, dropped on him. He was pinned down for more than an hour before his plight was discovered. He is in St. Luke's Hospital and his condition is serious.

SOMERVILLE'S TALLEST POLICEMAN RESIGNS

Patrolman Clyde W. Steeves, the tallest member of the Somerville police, standing six feet seven inches, has tendered his resignation as a member of the department and is to enter private business.

He has been connected with the department twelve years, ten of which he was a regular patrolman and two years as a reserve officer.

$15,000 SOUGHT BY GIRL IN LOVE SUIT

Miss McDonough Says She Didn't Know Hitchcock Was Married

Miss Marie McDonough of New York, who has brought suit for $15,000 for breach of promise against Frederick C. Hitchcock of Brookline, said today that she never knew the man was married until she arrived in Boston.

Hitchcock, who is a salesman, visited her frequently in her New York home, according to Miss McDonough. She said he urged her to come to Boston where they would be married. On one occasion, the young woman declared, Hitchcock notified his chauffeur to drive his car to New York so that they might ride back to Boston in it.

Miss McDonough further stated that shortly after her arrival in Boston she became ill and was removed to a hospital. While in the hospital, she said, Hitchcock ignored her existence.

Herbert L. Baker, attorney for Hitchcock, stated today that his client never made any promise to marry the young woman. "Of course he has met her a few times," the attorney admitted, "but that is all."

HAMS WORTH THOUSANDS LOST IN NORTH END FIRE

Several hundred dollars' worth of hams were consumed in a fire at the smokehouse of Morris & Co., packers, at North and Cross streets today. The fire, of unknown origin, started on the top floor of the five-story brick building. A dense smoke, due to the burning grease, hampered the efforts of the firemen.

Charles R. Stockton, manager for Morris & Co., later placed the damage at from $3,000 to $5,000. He said that, in addition to the hams, a large quantity of eggs and butter were damaged.

GOOD SECOND-HAND TRADE AT WELLESLEY

Both the second-hand book exchange and the second-hand furniture exchange at Wellesley College were well patronized the first week of the school year. Esther Moody, 1920, of East Northfield, managed the book exchange, which was located in the chapel basement. More than 15,000 books were handled. Ethel Schaeffer, 1920, of Newark, managed the furniture exchange. It is also in the chapel basement.

COURT STREET HOTEL MEN UNDER ARREST

Isaac Gordon and John Webber, both actively engaged in the management of the Hotel Higgins at No. 128 Court street, were arrested on warrants issued on the strength of evidence gathered by the Watch and Ward Society, who claim the place is of questionable repute.

BONUS DELAYED, MOTHER IS TO BE EVICTED

Unable to Pay $25 Due on Mortgage; Burrill Says He Is Sorry

A story of more than unusual distress arising out of delayed payment of war bonuses was told the American by the mother of a former member of the 101st Regiment, whose mortgage is to be foreclosed because the State cannot give her the $100 bonus until after next Wednesday.

"We would have had the $100 bonus this week," she explained, "except that my boy made one mistake in filling out his application. He merely put the name of his town, Malden, where he should have put the date and the date where he should have put the name of his town. The blank is therefore thrown out because of that, and he is asked to write another. That delays payment for a week or more and that means we lose our house.

IS TOLD TO VACATE.

"This morning I have received a notice to vacate, because $25 which was promised to the holder of the mortgage cannot be paid. That $25 would have been paid and the house saved if it had not been for the hide-bound, red-tape-encircled officials at the State Treasurer's office, who threw out my boy's application for such a little error as reversal of answers.

"But there are other things with regard to war payments that the American should give publicity to, for it will help many other mothers and many other boys except me and my son. Take the allotment. I have never received all of that due me, and the war is over a year now. At first I could not get any; was told by the same woman at the treasurer's office that my boy had not filed his application. I told them he had, and where it was, and she went back and got what she denied me.

NO THIRD PAYMENT.

"Then the third payment due me from the government is also missing. This is the pay the government promised to give wounded boys while they were learning self-support.

"My son is going to a local business college. He entered the first of September. He went for his first month's pay, but met me later in tears. 'They forgot to put my name on the list,' said he, 'and I cannot help you, mother, to save the house.' They lent me $5 instead of the $80 that the government agreed to pay me."

"This is th whole story," the mother concluded. "A story of delay by officials who do not care, so long as they make their own good salary; a story of boys walking about the city with their feet on the ground, while payment dallies. The promises of the government made to its soldiers, lingers on the sluggish movements of clerks too sleepy to put through the details with a little intelligence mixed in. I have had a member of my family in every war since 1812, but, were there another war I should use my influence to keep my men folk at home."

The boy in question was classed among the 50 per cent. wounded, and, at the present time, has no use of his left arm. He was discharged from service the first of September.

Treasurer Charles L. Burrill, when told the story over the telephone, said he was "sorry the woman would lose her house."

©PHOTO BY INTERNATIONAL

Lord and Lady Dunsany photographed on board the steamship La France, which brought them from England to New York. Photograph copyright by International.

New York, Oct. 10.—Two Irishmen, one of them didn't care to discuss home rule or the lack of it in Ireland, were among the passengers on the steamship France when she arrived here. The Irishmen were Lord Dunsany, the famous author dramatist, and John O'Sullivan, the tenor.

Lord Dunsay, who is here with his wife, on their first visit to this country, said that he had no interest in politics, Irish or otherwise. This creator of "Gods and Men" and other tales of a new mythology, and of a series of one-act plays which have become known the world over, said that an interviewer who asked him political questions had come to the wrong pier.

"Why ask me of the politics of Ireland?" he demanded to know. "I have sent to this country some Irish inspirations which I consider as I consider any art, vastly more important than politics. When you look back three or four hundred years, how many names can you recall of politicians? But you have no difficulty in recalling the names of famous artists. The work of politicians is but fleeting. It is changed every few years, but the work of the artist lives forever without change as he creates it.

DISLIKES POLITICS.

"Personally I consider politics on a lower plane than the arts. Some people may consider that politics occupies a higher plane. They may be right in their views. But personally I take no interest in politics and hence am no authority on the subject. There are about a half million of countrymen of mine willing to discuss politics with you. Not always perhaps for best interests of either themselves or their country.

"In my work I have always dealt with man not as an individual struggling against a political issue, but as man struggling against fate, destiny, or whatever you wish to call it. Such a struggle is eternal, not something that passes or changes over night.

"It is right that some men should occupy themselves with politics but is hardly more fair to ask an artist to discuss politics than it is right to ask a politician to discuss the arts."

FOUGHT IN GREAT WAR.

The nephew of Sir Horace Plunkett, who, besides being an author-dramatist is an agriculturist of some note in Ireland, is an extremely tall, well-built man. He fought with the Coldstream Guards in the World War.

His blue eyes twinkled as he said: "I believe that the arts are the principle agencies for the advancement of men. And I believe that we are living in an age when that advancement is going to be great. All of the arts will contribute, and none more so than the drama. If you want me to talk of strange countries, and races of men, tropical jungles, airplanes, and interpret for you the rhythm which pervades them, that I might undertake to do. But from politics I shrink."

BRINGS EIGHT PLAYS.

Lord Dunsany stated that he had brought to this country eight new plays, including several four-act ones. All those produced hitherto have been one-act plays. He has also brought two new volumes of tales. Speaking of the effect of the world war on literature and other arts, he said:

"I believe that twenty years from now will be a golden age such as the arts never knew. You have a race of young men who, through the war, have received a terrific impression into their early years.

"Armed with this impression, and drawing at the fertile field of whole countries in ruins, they will produce arts compared to which all that the past ages have known as arts will be pygmies. Our age and the ages which preceded it have had to go away back to Troy and the ancients for their materials.

"Today the materials of art and of romance are scattered through every village of Europe. Time will give what we lack today—the proper perspective."

WARNS AGAINST 'CUT PRICES' BY GERMANY

Peace Declaration Will Mean Flood of Cheap Goods to America, Says Smoot

Washington, Oct. 10.—Congress must build defences against German commerce as soon as the peace treaty is ratified, Senator Reed Smoot of Utah declared today.

Germany is prepared to flood the United States with dyestuffs, surgical goods and glassware, as soon as trade relations are formally resumed, and American industry will be forced to compete against prices which will be so low as to be unfair, Senator Smoot believes.

"Every German port of embarkation," he said, "is now loaded with goods which Germany will send to this country the minute that peace is declared."

To offset this, Senator Smoot has prepared an "anti-dumping" bill which would give the Secretary of the Treasury power to forbid importation of goods sold to importers at unfair prices.

O'BRIEN SERVES BUT 6 HOURS IN JAIL

Boston Fish Pier Head, Sentenced for Perjury, "Works Out Time" Reading

William J. O'Brien, president of the Boston Fish Pier Company, who was sentenced by Judge Aldrich in the United States District Court to a day in the East Cambridge Jail and fined $500 for perjury, has left that institution.

O'Brien was in the East Cambridge jail just six hours and forty minutes. He arrived there in custody of Deputy United States Marshal Bradley. O'Brien was dressed in a grey sack suit, an olive colored soft hat and wore tan shoes. He carried a bundle of newspapers and two magazines under his arm.

He was greeted by Sheriff John R. Fairbairn, who turned him over to the booking officer, Leo Shields. Here the jail rules stepped in. O'Brien had to throw away a cigar he was smoking. He also had to discard the bundle of newspapers. No daily papers are allowed in the jail and the only thing permissible to smoke is a pipe.

O'Brien read the two magazines he had brought with him in his cell until 9 o'clock. Then the jail lights went out and he sat in darkness waiting for the jail officials to release him at midnight.

Lucky Fellow Finds Pint He Threw Away Five Years Ago

A Jamaica Plain man, who shuns publicity in this particular instance, is the proud possessor of a full pint of extra good XXXX whiskey that he knows is at least five years old. It happened this way:

Five years ago a friend insisted that he take a pint of the then common stuff home with him. Not being a drinking man he tried to refuse, but the friend insisted that he "keep it in the house."

The man's wife induced him to throw the bottle out the window. It rolled down an embankment at the side of the house. The other day Mr. Husband was browsing about beneath the embankment, and poking around, the neck of a bottle protruded. He fished it to light and beheld the now almost invaluable pint. Now, he says, Friend Wife heartily agrees with him that he'd better keep it secure.

HINES ORDERS EMBARGO UPON N. Y. EXPORTS

Strike of 100,000 Dock Laborers Ties Up Shipping and Cargoes

Director-General Hines of the Railway Administration today issued an order stopping the issuance of permits for exporting merchandise from the port of New York, according to a Washington dispatch received here. This is because of the strike of 100,000 longshoremen in that city. The docks are congested, and to receive any more freight would add to the difficulty.

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 10.—Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams, fearing that 5,000 carloads of perishable food will rot on the docks here, announced today he would strive to persuade striking longshoremen to handle the food during the negotiations that have been opened between the strikers and their employers for more pay.

A committee of three from each of the twelve local unions, representatives of the shipping interests and the National Adjustment Commission met today in an effort to settle the strike which is estimated to have made 100,000 men idle. It was reported the strike might spread to the port terminal workers, including firemen, deckhands, cooks and water tenders on railroad boats. Marine firemen are understood to have voted not to operate boilers of ships loaded by non-union men. Leaders of the International Longshoremen's Association have succeeded in inducing the strikers to replace their case in the hands of the union, failing, however to win promise of a return to work during negotiations.

The port has been tied up by "an irresponsible mob of longshoremen, who have been stampeded into an unauthorized strike by I. W. W. and Bolshevik influences."

This explanation of the manner in which the strike was brought about was given by T. V. O'Connor, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, which, according to Mr. O'Connor, has no sympathy whatever with the strike.

55,000 MEN ON STRIKE.

With fully 55,000 men on strike and inflamed by radical literature which is being circulated freely among them, the strike has passed the point where it can be controlled by any ordinary means, either by government or union officials.

The gravity of the situation was placed before the Washington authorities by Benjamin M. Squires, secretary of the National Adjustment Commission, whose recent award the longshoremen have flouted by striking.

Mr. Squires' communication was addressed to Secretary Baker, Daniels and Wilson, of the Departments of War, Navy and Labor. He declared the trouble was caused by "a radical minority which has been able for the time being to stampede the great majority of fair-minded workers."

Five thousand carloads of perishable foodstuffs are being held up through lack of men to handle the goods, it is reported.

FRENCH LINER DELAYED.

The French line steamer France was the last steamer to dock, and she came in only after being delayed eighteen hours and her crew handled the passengers' baggage. The Rochambeau made the port but was unable to dock, owing to the strike.

Appeal has been made by union men to Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor to use his best office to terminate the strike.

Applying the multiplication table to VALUE

CLOTHES have the spot-light here all to themselves. In a department store clothes are one of many lines.

What is the result? More values, better values, values all the year round, every day, every hour—values multiplied in number by the number of separate Filene shops, each one of which is a specialty shop.

In the case of women's dresses alone, there are five separate Filene shops, with five times as many values as though there were one shop. Each shop is so specialized it does as much business as many shops which inclde all dresses.

And the multiplication table is making better values in everything to wear all through Filene's every day.

Would you expect these women's good-looking $15 serge frocks cost so little?

PROTESTS JAP ATTITUDE IN SIBERIA

Graves Reports Tokyo Is Indifferent to Safety of American Troops

Washington, Oct. 10.—Reports to the War Department from Major-General W. S. Graves, in command of the American forces in Siberia, call attention to the fact that Japan is not properly safeguarding certain sections of the Trans-Siberian railway where American engineers are working.

The communication of General Graves is to all intents and purposes a protest but it remains to be seen whether the United States will make it the basis of formal representations to the Allies.

This is purely conjecture, as the War Department is turning over the reports of General Graves to the State Department as they are received and neither department will discuss the situation.

The attitude toward conditions in Siberia which General Graves has assumed is known to the Japanese commander there, it is said here. Furthermore he is said to have made known that attitude in Tokyo. There is little doubt here that General Graves has determined that the withdrawal of the American troops will be necessary if present conditions continue.

The impression in official circles is that Japan has entered upon a policy to deliberately force a clash or the retirement of the American forces. In either event, this country would be playing into her hands, one high army official pointed out today.

He declared that Japan has made friends with the most radical element in the Kolchak monarchist party, which was shown when the Japanese soldiers openly espoused the recent arrest of an American officer and soldier and the flogging of the latter by Cossacks.

The same official said there is no necessity for the retention of American forces in Siberia, but should they be withdrawn the State Department should demand adequate safeguards from the Allies for the American interests there.

DEMANDS AID FOR TORTURED ARMENIANS

Rector Calls on Episcopalians to Let Prayer Book Changes Wait

By THE REV. E. CLOWES CROWLEY,

Historiographer of the Episcopal Diocese of New York.

Written Specially for Universal Service.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 10.—"While we are sitting here Armenians are being murdered by the thousands. Instead of discussing changes in the prayer-book which concern nobody but ourselves, why does not this convention adopt resolutions about these foul atrocities and bring such pressure to bear upon the President and the Senate that they shall be brought to an end?"

So dramatically cried Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia, as he introduced a resolution that the report on the new prayer book should not be considered at this convention.

With many other delegates he holds that in these critical days of social unrest and industrial strife the convention should give its whole time to larger questions.

The suggestion led to confusion, and at times the convention was wrought to a high pitch of excitement. The resolution to postpone consideration was defeated. A further wrangle ensued as to the method of considering the report, and this was finally referred to a committee.

Prayer book revision has been under way for six years, and the committee now presents its final report.

The provisions allowing reservation of the blessed sacrament, anointing the sick with oil, prayers for the dead and for a blessing for the grave are looked on with great disfavor by the low churchmen, and they will spare no effort to defeat the proposals.

TEACHERS ASK FLAT INCREASE OF $600

Defend Former Attorney-General Parker for Efforts to Better Conditions

At the meeting of the Boston Elementary Teachers' Club in Huntington Hall, a motion was carried urging the School Committee to secure from the Legislature a flat $600 increase in wages.

Another resolution was passed which sets forth the claims of the teachers. They contended that they are not adequately paid for the service they render, and that they cannot meet the increased cost of living at their present salares.

Former Attorney-General Parker was vigorously defended in the resolution.

TEACHERS DEFEND PARKER.

The resolution follows:

"Inasmuch as recent newspaper statements tend to misrepresent the attitude of Herbert Parker, in his services for the elementary teachers of Boston, and cast discredit upon him, I move that the following statement, as expressive of the feeling of the great body of elementary teachers toward our honorable counsel, be adopted by this meeting:

"To whom it may concern: During almost ten years of service for the Boston elementary teachers, Herbert Parker has with utmost patience given generously his valued time and attention to every matter presented, however complicated and detailed.

"The representatives of the club, upon accession to office, have been made welcome by him as club counsel, and have in turn received unstintingly of his time and advice. This with the full understanding that no fee would ever be accepted for such service.

"In many instances, visits of club officers' counsel have extended considerably beyond regular office hours. Individuals among the teachers have also sought Mr. Parker's counsel and have been made to realize the extent of his regard for all teachers, by his friendly concern for their personal difficulties.

POINT TO HIS EFFORTS.

"He has repeatedly appeared before legislative committees and in conference with public officials, pleading our cause earnestly after painstaking preparation. In all our association with Mr. Parker, we have found him magnanimous, unassuming and sincere.

"No teacher, however ignorant of club activity, can be unmindful of his unfailing and continued service in our behalf. At frequent intervals, we have attempted to express our indebtedness to him by some personal gift, bestowed upon him, but such gift has always been secured wholly without his knowledge and accepted by him under protest.

"The testimonial of 1,600 elementary teachers, bound in morocco, and presented to Mr. Parker in 1913, but feebly expresses the high regard and esteem in which he is now held by all teachers, after ten years of devoted service to our cause."

KILLED AT CROSSING HE HAD FOUGHT TO ABOLISH

Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 10.—To be killed on the same grade crossing that he had for years been striving to have abolished was the fate of A. A. Hicks, president of the Douglas County Farm Bureau. He was struck by a train while watching a child being rescued in front of a train passing on another track.

The crossing on which the accident occurred has been the scene of several serious accidents and is the same by which the new fort-to-fort highway will enter Lawrence.

'WORLD'S MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN' IN RENARD SUIT

Miss Maude Mason, named in the suit Mrs. Maurice Renard has brought against the wealthy New York gown maker.

New York, Oct. 10.—Maurice Renard, who conducts one of those exclusive Fifth avenue gown shops that strike terror in the minds and pocketbooks of paterfamilias considered Miss Maude Mason, one of his models, the most beautiful woman in the world, says his wife, who has filed suit for a separation. He was willing to pay $10,000 a year for her, says Mrs. Renard, who charges that the husband spent about that on Miss Mason.

Of course the wife objected. She doesn't agree with Maurice's estimate of the beautiful model. She also is opposed to having Miss Mason wear her personal finery and declares that she found a lot of it in the model's apartment.

In the meantime Maurice has fled. An assistant in charge of the store said today that he believed Mr. Renard was still in New York, although efforts to locate him have been unsuccessful.

Miss Mason is in seclusion, too. She will probably be the star witness when the divorce suit comes up for trial.

Mrs. Renard asks a flat $12,000 a'limony and an accounting of the books of her husband's establishment. She asserts this is quite reasonable in view of the gown maker's expenditures on his model.

Mrs. Renard was at her home today following a trip to Greenwich, Ct., to trace the supposed movements of her husband. She admitted that she had been unsuccessful.

WILL REINSTATE QUINCY WOMAN TEACHER

School Committee Overrides Superintendent Who Discharged Miss Hernan

Miss Euphrasia Hernan, who was retired on the charge of inefficiency last February after forty years' service as a teacher in the primary grade of Adams School, Quincy, will be reinstated with reservations by the school committee.

The committee has voted to reinstate Miss Hernan with back pay from her retirement, give her one month's vacation upon the condition that she would resign at the end of her vacation. Her friends today predicted that she would not resign.

The teacher's retirement was ordered by Superintendent of Schools Albert L. Barbour. Miss Heran contested before the committee and there were several hearings. Thursday night her defence was presented by her attorney, Edward J. Fegan.

Statements made by Superintendent Barbour that he had criticized her work prior to her retirement and told her of the standard she should have to reach to retain her position in the Quincy schools were denied by Miss Hernan. She denied that teachers of the second grade had criticized the training of pupils that had come to them for Miss Hernan's class.

At a previous hearing before the school committee Miss Marian L. Wesley, a supervisor, said that Miss Lora Lamb, teacher of the second grade at the Adams School, had told her the condition of Miss Hernan's classes was bad. Miss Lamb refuted this when she defended Miss Hernan before the committee Thursday night.

She testified that all the classes she received from Miss Hernan were good with the exception of the one of September, 1918. The inefficiency of this class she attributed to the influenza epidemic and the mental calibre of some of the pupils.

Peacock Rids Farm of Snakes

Llanrwst, Wales, Oct. 15.—A snake-killing peacock of deadly accuracy has rid a farm near here of bothersome pests. When it arrived at the farm and was uncrated it pounced upon a four-foot snake and in half an hour had killed seventeen reptiles.

Legal Test of 2.75 Beer on Students at Columbia

New York, Oct. 10.—While there is not a chance in the world that the curriculum of Columbia University will be extended to cover the effect of 2.75 per cent. beer upon the human system, it was learned today that the laboratory and half a dozen Columbia students were utilized in a test of beer which will be used in a lawsuit.

The suit, it was said, would be filed in an effort by brewers to compel the government to legalize the manufacture and sale of the decimal product as non-intoxicating.

The tests were made under the direction of Professor H. L. Hollingsworth, Professor R. S. Woodworth and a corps of assistants.

MAYOR WILL PROBE STRIKE RIOT CLAIMS

Padded claims against the city of Boston for damages due to riots during the police strike will not go. Mayor Peters is authority for this ultimatum. The claims against the city are close to $100,000 and each one, according to the Mayor, will be carefully investigated. "I guess the city hasn't been offered any markdowns," observed the Mayor with a laugh. "Everyone of the claims will be thoroughly investigated. No padded accounts will be permitted to go through."

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 10c and 25c.

VON TIRPITZ URGED BURNING OF LONDON TO TERRORIZE WORLD

WANTED AIR RAID ON GREAT SCALE OR NONE AT ALL

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS.

By ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

Charleville, October 11, 1914.

The fall and manner of taking Antwerp has made an impression abroad. The strength of the German people is wonderful. It is standing here in the West against three nations, in the East against the wave of Pan-Slavism, and beside the slovenly Austrians whom we must disentangle. Today we once more have news that Turkey is about to go forward, but I will not believe it until shots have been fired. They have promised too often.

One is glad of the fine weather for the sake of the poor fellows in the trenches, although the French would not have tsood rain as well as we.

A strange war! From the Vosges via Paris to the Channel one long temporary ring of forts on both sides which could only be stormed at the cost of the greatest bloodshed. On the other side, a fortress built at a cost of hundreds of millions taken in twelve days with no great losses.

The aeroplane and motor play an undreamed of part, as indeed do all technics. Bridges and tunnels which formerly took years to build are constructed in a fortnight. Witnessing this tremendous diligence on the part of our people cannot but bring the conviction that they cannot be conquered. Only the silent pressure of sea power is to be feared.

As Herr von Heydebrand (leader of the Prussian war party in the Reichstag) said in 1911, "England is the enemy." It is revolting to see how the fellows carry on their sport while Europe is lacerating itself.

(Editor's Note: In the American and British armies, and to a certain extent in the French, sports and all competitive games were played under an organized system and were valuable in keeping up the morale of the men and developing resourcefulness and alertness.)

Everyone is still very uncertain as to where the Belgian army is since the fall of Antwerp. Probably they got off to England and Holland in civilian dress.

Charleville, October 14, 1914.—Commanded to dine with the Emperor this evening. Probably because of the U-boat successes in the Gulf of Finland, where Graf Berkheim's son sunk several Russian warships. What a pity they were not English.

In Brussels we found an excited population and only a few German troops, including a naval detachment of 5,000 concentrated at the law courts.

GERMANY LOSES INITIATIVE.

One of Field Marshal von Der Goltz' officers told me that at a time when the civil population did not know whether the Germans were besieging Antwerp or the Belgians besieging Brussels, a civilian said to him, "But, Monsieur, you are the prisoners."

"But," he added, "after the fall of Antwerp the opinion changed somewhat."

Charleville, October 15, 1914.—The present mode of warfare is killing all initiative. That may be the ruin of us. Conquer us they will not, but it may be easily all over with Germany's position in the world.

It is strange how unpopular we are and how our whole diplomatic service has broken down.

Charleville, October 16, 1914.—We are in great suspense here waiting further events in the north. Here and there are expressed doubts as to a decided success. The English have crept along the sea and stand high in the north. I do not know whether we shall be able to take Calais.

In the French headquarters there is said to be a good deal of depression, and it is reported that the colored troops do not get along well with the white. The fall of Antwerp made a great impression on the London public. But the fabrication of lies in London exceeds all belief.

Charleville, October 17, 1914 (to my wife).—The new army drive is nearly the last trump we have to play. They are not at all certain here that it will be a success. If it does not succeed, then what Jagow predicted today as to the end of the war will take place. He thinks the war will stagnate and die slowly from general exhaustion. That would be bad for us.

FORESAW UPHEAVAL.

That the conclusion of peace will not satisfy the German people is what I fear. I do not for one minute believe in the overthrow of our people. A people who have shown such splendid qualities as the Germans in this trying war cannot be overthrown. Whether the inheritance which we shall leave to our children will be a rich one is another matter.

The method of our government will have to alter, whether of its own free will or by force. I read today some extracts from a socialist paper which pleased me very much. Social democracy has comprehended that its international idea is an Utopia in a world of hard realities and strangely enough it has also comprehended that not Russia but England is the enemy with whom we have to deal.

All would go well if we had political leaders. Also one cannot but wonder at times whether our new cautiously after the failure of their predecessors.

Our U-boats are doing their work splendidly, but of course even in this case we must reckon with accidents.

Charleville, Oct. 18, 1914.—As for the fruits of victory—we have yet no victories which can be turned to account. The luck was ours at first and we gambled it away. At present the only thing for us to do is to hold out as long as possible and let the other come on. I fear we are going to disappoint the German people after the terrible sacrifices they have made and the loss of life. They will expect more than we can ever give them. If we do not take the reins into our hands in regards to the home policy we will be forced into reforms which will go beyond what is reasonable.

If the war should stagnate and slowly die out it will be all over with Germany's position in the word. We are so surrounded by the hate and ill will of all the world that only a great victory can help us.

Just consider. We have not the hate only of our enemies, but practically of all neutrals, with the possible exception of Sweden and German Switzerland. And then think that the cause of the war was Serbia. We are none the less regarded all over the world as the instigators.

Get the pamphlet which appeared in Holland and which is propaganda for an international league after the war against "boorish parvenu Germany" who intrudes everywhere." ALTHOUGH OVERFLOWING WITH HATRED TOWARD US, IT UNFORTUNATELY CONTAINS A GOOD DEAL OF TRUTH.

In England the entire nation is carrying on the war with the greatest enthusiasm and bulldog tenacity. Our people are doing that, too, but how can we close with the bulldog, particularly as seven other dogs are harassing us?

(Editor's Note: Compare this admission with German propaganda in this country which at the same time claimed that England was half hearted in the war and that its conduct was causing serious political and social discontent. German agents were also spreading through France reports that England was not seriously conducting the war.)

BAN ON MUNITIONS.

Charleville, October 19, 1914.—This morning the Chancellor invited me to a conference on peace. To think of peace now! One would think we were already beaten. I cannot talk of peace until we have complete victory.

We expect a big battle in a few days. God grant us victory. We need it bitterly.

I agree fully with the article by Carl Peters with the exception of treating badly the English who are now in Germany.

(Peters resided in England until the outbreak of the war.)

In the east 29 German and Austrian corps are confronted by 43 Russian. The Austrian count about halm. The Turks are already calling for munitions and we have none to spare, quite apart from the fact that Rumania will allow no more to pass.

Charleville, November 13, 1914.—My attempt to have Flotow replaced by Buelow in Rome has failed because of objections by the Chancellor. After the war I shall become a socialist and pick out some lamp posts and not too few either, for if things are to be better the whole hydra must be attacked.

* * *

Charleville, November 14, 1914.—We shall not get to Calais. It is a draw game and will remain so, but do not speak about it. In the north both sides confront each other completely exhausted. We have lost about 100,000 men there alone. We have no new corps to replace them.

VERY BAD NEWS.

I have just spoken to Colonel von Marschall of the Cabinet, who was, like all the others here, of the opinion that the other side would not find out our losses, and that England cannot bring up as many reinforcements as we can. That may be true, but a drawn game on land is bad without a fleet to help.

Yesterday there was very bad news from the Black Sea, where Turkish munition ships were torpedoed and the Turks are without ammunition. Who will be able to hold out the longest?

Charleville, November 15, 1914.—The quality of the English troops is not so high as it was, but only at the sacrifice of great bloodshed can we make even the smallest gain against them. At the same time this pirate State is pressing in so unheard of a manner on the neutrals that we shall soon be in a bad way in regard to many necessary articles, such as powder, motor tires, etc.

The Minister of War, von Falkenhayn, seems to be looking for a way out through France rather than Russia. I think this is a mistake, as France will cling to Russia, her ally.

RECEIVES IRON CROSS.

Charleville, November 18, 1914 (to my wife).—Yesterday I was decorated with the Iron Cross, order of the first class. I had no pleasure in it, although under other circumstances how proud I should have been. I could not refrain from saying to His Majesty that it had not been earned, whereupon he said that here in Charleville we had none of us earned it. Caprivi's saying occurred to me:

"Decorations come with age as measles in childhood."

I cannot wear it.

The English now fear the Zeppelins, perhaps with good reason. Whenever I have the opportunity I advocate a stand-up fight, but I am not for such chicanery. The dropping of bombs which kill only old women is odious, moreover people become accustomed to it. But if London could be set on fire in thirty places the tremendous effect would overcome the odiousness.

We must be clear as to whether England means war to the knife. If we are convinced that she ruthlessly intends our destruction, then we, too, must make ruthless use of our weapons, if we have faith in our people and will not commit a crime against their future.

(Editor's Note: This was written more than a month before the first air raid on London which was perpetrated Christmas Eve, 1914.)

Charleville, November 21, 1914.—Today an American journalist recommended by Erzberger called to see me. The Hungarian minister president, Count Tisza, was also there. The American was not satisfied with his government. He thought they would have to pay for Tsingtau's fall. He hinted that our diplomacy has no understanding for the influence of the press and just as little for trans-Atlantic conditions.

It will be very difficult for those in Wilhelmstrasse to proclaim me the scapegoat. There were too many involved in the proceedings of the Foreign Office in July, that mad sliding into the war!

URGED RUTHLESS WAR.

Charleville, November 26, 1914.—Lunch with the Emperor today. Was glad of the opportunity to say that England meant business, that we should use every weapon at our disposal and establish a submarine blockade. His Majesty thinks it too extreme a measure.

Charleyville, December 22, 1914.—I stand quite alone among the older men in my opinion that we must remain in Flanders even later. It seems to be making itself understood.

(Editor's Note: This statement is somewhat ambiguous but taken in conjunction with other remarks of von Tirpitz, probably indicates that he advocated the permanent occupation of Flanders or at least occupation for a period after the war.)

Charleville, Dec. 23, 1914.—The Crown Prince was here today. I had another opportunity to speak of Flanders. I was glad that he agreed with my opinion.

Charleville, Dec. 24, 1914.—Just returned from the Christmas celebration in the temporary chapel. Presents for the men were on a long table. In front was a small platform with a carpet for His Majesty and the staff. Before it was an image of the nativity, not very large, but prettily executed. Huge Christmas trees were lighted with candles. We sang a few verses and then Pleasen thanked the Emperor in the name of the army.

The Kaiser responded with a few hearty words and then walked through the ranks of men with kind words for all. He was very affable and cheerful.

At the end we sang three verses of "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht." The whole was very dignified and festive.

CONTINUED TOMORROW.

In the next instalment: Treatment of American press representatives. Consideration of plan to dismember Austria to keep Italy out of the war. Submarine and air war urged as sop to people for inactivity of the fleet. Conversation with French civilization. Humorous incident on board French warship in 1876. Believes in retention of Belgium. Urges bombardment of London.

"Big Berthas" Are Hidden Away, Says Berlin Paper

By Universal Service.

Paris, Oct. 10.—Guns are guns, but they're not necessarily "Big Berthas."

This evidently has been the reasoning of the German war office with regard to the long range guns used for bombarding Paris during the latter stage of the war. The "Berliner Tageblatt" quotes Major Trepper, formerly of the war ministry as saying:

"Article 67 of the peace treaty refers only to two big heavy guns, so it was left to the Germans to decide upon the sort of guns they would deliver. If the French want to know where the Berthas are, they can be told that they are well hidden and guarded in our fortresses on the coast."

BRITISH WOMEN SOLDIERS RECALLED FROM TOURS

London, Oct. 10.—A number of Britain's famous women soldiers, affectionately known as "Waacs," sent for service with the Americans at Tours, have been recalled.

At one time service with the American Army was regarded as more or less of a punishment, but now the girls seem to think they are undergoing another punishment by being recalled.

Some fifty of the original detachment are now the brides of Americans and are either already in the States or on their way there.

MORE THAN 3,000 ARE ENROLLED AT TECH

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, after three years in its new buildings on the Charles, is confronted with a condition of overcrowding which bids fair to rival the discomforts in the old Boylston street buildings from which the Institute moved.

Total registration figures compiled place the number of students at 3,033. The greatest previous enrollment was that of 1,951 students in 1916-1917.

POLICE SEEK OWNERS OF 8 STOLEN AUTOS

Eight stolen automobiles — two roadsters and six touring cars—with no identification marks, are awaiting their owners in the custody of Captain John J. Canney of the Cambridge police. Captain Canney stated that the number plates of the cars were removed and engine numbers effaced when the machines were stolen. Through the confessions of prisoners, the police have been enabled to return fifteen stolen cars to their owners.

North Adams, Oct. 10.—A radish weighing five and one-half pounds has been raised by George Simon of No. 328 State street and is being viewed with interest by many. It is one of the largest ever seen in this section.

SAYS PROFIT IN INSURANCE IS TOO LARGE

Hardison Advises 10 Per Cent. Reduction in Workmen's Compensation Rates

An immediate average reduction of 10 per cent in workmen's compensation insurance rates by the insurance companies is recommended in the annual report issued today of Frank H. Hardison, former member of the State Insurance Commission [illegible] in August.

Mr. Hardison declares that under the revision of rates granted in 1917 the companies are making a larger profit than can be "fairly approved."

"The extent of the reduction can not be decided until there has been a more complete study of the facts from the point of view of the public and of the companies, but an average reduction of 10 per cent. would appear to be not far out of the way," the report states.

"While it is expected that a country-wide revision of rates will be made within the next six months, in fairness to Massachusetts employers a revision should be made here at once."

The report also declares that, while the companies were allowed to increase rates "owing to various unforeseen causes favoring the insurance companies, these rates have resulted in profits larger than any rate-making board would knowingly provide for."

It is also pointed out that, while increases were caused by higher wages due to the war and large payments for overtime work, there has been no proportionate increase in benefits to injured workmen.

HITS LAWYERS WHO EMPLOY 'RUNNERS'

Court Forces Providence Attorney to Return Money Paid by Prisoner

Providence, Oct 10. In an effort to stamp out the practice of some attorneys of posting "runners" at the State prison to drum up business with inmates, Assistant Attorney-General A. A. Capotosto today assigned a lawyer to visit the institution each week to advise with prisoners who seek counsel.

Grand jury action was threatened by Mr Capotosto as a result of numerous complaints that prisoners and their families had been imposed upon by unscrupulous attorneys. It has been the practice of the latter, Mr Capotosto alleges, to promise the exertion of political and other influence in exchange for money. In some cases, he said, families of prisoners have mortgaged property and suffered other hardships to raise the prices charged for this service.

Mr Capotosto threatened to place the matter in the hands of the Grand Jury after Judge J. Jerome Hahn of the Superior Court had administered a severe rebuke to Attorney George W. Bennett Jr. The latter was ordered by the court to return to Frank E. Martin a client $150 which Martin said he had paid as the result of representations made to him by a "runner" for Bennett.

COMMUTERS TO BE HEARD BY PROUTY

R. R. Board Man Will Attend Boston Hearing Tomorrow on Suburban Fares

Tomorrow will be "people's day" at the continued hearing into the proposed increase in suburban fares on steam railroads. C. A. Prouty, representing the Federal Railroad Administration, is coming on from Washington to hear representatives of the riders tell why there should be no increase in fares to suburban points.

More than fifty speakers are registered to speak in behalf of the thousands of commuters who will be affected by any increased rates. The railroad companies are seeking either a flat ten cent rate in territory in which they compete with the Boston Elevated or else a 25 per cent increase on twelve-ride tickets and the abolishing of the five-ride ticket.

The hearing will be held in the Public Service Commission's hearing room at 10 o'clock and will be adjourned to the auditorium if there is an overflow.

POLICE NOT BUSY, CITIZENS USE THEM FOR ODD JOBS

Steubenville, O., Oct. 10.—With arrests showing a reduction from 400 to 60 a month because of prohibition, the question of what to do with the policemen is the burning question here. Citizens understanding the situation have sought out the idle cops for different odd jobs. Desk records at the police station show that there were eleven calls from women who wanted their automobiles cranked, one from a business man who wished three mice killed, three calls from women who wanted dead rats buried, one call to exterminate a swarm of bugs about an arc light and four calls from women shoppers who mislaid their parasols.

Winthrop 'Live Wires' to Continue Spirit of Americanism

Live citizens of the town of Winthrop are to form an organization which is destined to become nation-wide in its scope, according to F. E. O'Neil of that town. Tonight a meeting will be held for organization. A tentative name of the organization suggested is the War Workers' League of America.

The aim of the organization will be to continue the spirit of all Americanism, to start a campaign of education along this line and to create a common ground on which the merchant, salesman and members of the middle class can meet to discuss important issues of the day.

The leaders in this movement include F. E. O'Neil, Elmer F. Dawson, Sidney S. Tucker, Mathew C. Walsh, Dean C. Freeman and George J. Cronenwett.

ANOTHER WAR OVER A MERE "SCRAP OF PAPER"

Reading, Pa., Oct. 10.—There have been numerous wars waged over "mere scraps of paper," but so far as can be ascertained this is the only one that resulted from a sheet of correspondence paper. Helen Hige of this city, alleges that Dorothy and Blanche Hammon took offense because her five-year-old son happened to tear a sheet of paper taken from a 25-cent box of correspondence material. The case will be carried to court.

Some Things That Every Man Should Know

With clothing prices where they are today, a man can't afford to step into the first store he comes to and take the first garment offered him. There's too much at stake. He ought to realize now, if he never did before, that there's a vast difference between clothing stores, the merchandise they deal in and the values they give.

If he wants to buy intelligently and get the utmost possible value for his money, he should know that by coming to this Live Store for something to wear he is coming to the undisputed headquarters for style and quality, and is dealing with the greatest value-giving institution in the field of men's wear.

He should know that these Kennedy Stores are the largest spot-cash dealers in Good Clothes in America, that our cost of doing business is the lowest ever known in our line, and that all the advantages we gain through big buying and low expenses go to our customers in the form of lower prices.

Every man ought to know these facts. Then let him buy wherever he pleases. He can't plead ignorance if he pays more than Kennedy prices or gets less than Kennedy values, but he still has the privilege of coming here the next time. Our latch-string is always out.

Kuppenheimer Clothes

There are lots of things you ought to know about these famous garments — about the woolens, the styles, the tailoring, etc. But after all it's the good style, good fit, good service and good satisfaction in every one of them that's of most importance and that make Kuppenheimer Suits the best clothing investment obtainable today at

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected a complete cure after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes Disordered Stomachs feel fine at once!

Lumps of undigested food causing pain. When your stomach is acid, and is gassy, sour, or you have heartburn, flatulence, headache or dyspepsia, here is speedy relief—no waiting.

Eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin and instantly your stomach feels fine. All the indigestion pain, gases, acidity and misery in the stomach caused by acidity ends.

Pape's Diapepsin tablets cost little at any drug store, but there is no surer or quicker stomach antacid known.—Advertisement.

FRANCE IS SOON TO RATIFY TREATY

Peace Conditions the World Over Expected to Follow

By Universal Service.

Special Cable Dispatch.

Paris, Oct. 10.—Within a few days the French Senate will ratify the treaty of Versailles which will then become fully operative, provided King George's signature follows promptly.

The treaty's coming into effect is looked forward to as the event that will re-establish peace conditions the world over. Whether the ardent hopes pinned upon this event are justified only the future can tell. But France, at any rate, is busily getting ready for the general return to a peace basis.

Official relations with Germany will be resumed immediately after the ratification. Herr von Lersner will formally take possession of the German embassy building in the Rue de Lille, one of the handsomest mansions in this capital, and France will have an official diplomatic representative in Berlin.

MEANS BIRTH OF LEAGUE.

From a political viewpoint the date of the official cessation of hostilities means the birth of the League of Nations, and the smaller countries which are not yet members of the League must present their applications to join within two months.

France will automatically become the proprietor of the Saar coal mines; Germany will evacuate sections of Silesia, East Prussia and Schleswig which are subject to plebiscite, and the German authorities in these districts will be replaced by international commissions until the inhabitants have decided their own fate.

Germany must notify the allied and associated powers immediately of the strength of her armaments; she must discontinue all military missions abroad, destroy all unfinished warships in her navy yards, sweep up the mines in the North Sea, give up all aeronautical equipment, and return all art treasures and objects of value stolen by her during the war.

She will be automatically dispossessed of her warships lying in foreign ports and must immediately reduce the size of her army so as to have only 200,000 men under arms within two months.

At the same time allied commissions will be constituted to undertake the delimination of the new frontiers. The reparations commission must meet in Paris at the earliest possible date.

Another important and immediate sequel to the return of official peace will be the despatch to Germany within thirty days of a list of war culprits demanded for trial.

30 DAYS TO SURRENDER SUBS.

Germany is given thirty days to surrender her submarines and two months to give up her war material and freight ships in the ton-for-ton restitution. She has three months in which to dismantle all war factories and surrender to the Allies the secrets of her high explosives and asphyxiating gases, while within six months she must give back to France the war trophies won in 1870-71. Within the same period she must return to England the skull of the Sultan of Makaoua, which, incidentally, the German authorities claim is not in their possession.

For six months allied and associated powers will have the right to be treated on the most-favored nations basis as regards customs and tariffs. Finally, an entire year is allowed individuals to renew or oppose the rights of industrial property acquired in enemy countries from August 1, 1914, to date.

METHUEN BOY IS INJURED BY AUTO

Lawrence, Oct. 10.—Colby Peterson, six years old, of No. 17 Oakland avenue, Methuen, was struck and seriously injured by an automobile driven by [illegible] Hardy near Brown street and Broadway.

It was stated that the auto was going 15 miles an hour when the child ran in front of the machine. The owner of the automobile rushed the child to the Lawrence General Hospital where he was found to be suffering from a possible fractured skull and a broken leg.

200 GROCERY WORKERS ARE OUT ON STRIKE

Max Hamlin, secretary of the United Hebrew Trades, announced the beginning of a strike by more than 200 men employed in the wholesale grocery establishments in the vicinity of Fulton street.

He said that the men struck for a 25 per cent increase in wages and a 55 hour work week. It is said that the wages now range from $15 to $22 a week and that there is no limit to the working hours.

EX-SOLDIER KILLED FIRST DAY OF WORK

George W. Baker, aged nineteen, of No. 15 High View avenue, Melrose, a brakeman on the Boston & Maine Railroad, died instantly when he was knocked from a freight train while his train was passing under the Greenwood bridge at Wakefield. He was an ex-service man and was working for the first time since landing from France.

HEATH HONORED BY AMERICAN LEGION

Victor Heath, former chairman of the Boston Public Safety Committee, has been elected honorary member of Roxbury Post, No. 44, American Legion. Major-General Clarence R. Edwards is the only other member to share this distinction. Mr Heath addressed the Post at its last meeting and it was as a result of his brilliant address that he was given this honor.

GRACE VALENTINE, as she appears in "Seven Miles to Arden."

DRIVER'S BONES BROKEN WHEN HURLED OFF TEAM

James H. Rollen, aged 55 years, of No. 125 F street, South Boston, suffered severe injuries when the team of horses which he was driving suddenly bolted, throwing him to the ground. The accident occurred at the corner of [illegible] road and Pond street, Jamaica Plain.

Rollen was taken to the City Hospital with a dislocated shoulder, a fracture of the left scapula and fractures of the left ribs.

CUTTYHUNK BOAT SERVICE TO RESUME

New Bedford, Oct. 10.—For the first time since the war regular steamboat service is to be established between this city and the island of Cuttyhunk. The steamer Frances, which has been plying around Boston harbor as a passenger boat, has been purchased by Cuttyhunk residents. The vessel has a capacity of 300 passengers.

STAGE COLLEEN IRISH ONLY IN PLAY

Grace Valentine Far from Patsy O'Connell Type in Street Attire

"Are you really Irish?"

Grace Valentine laughed. She is used to being asked that question. Her answer is "Only part. My mother had Irish blood."

Yet the actress is Patsy O'Connell to the life, in "Seven Miles to Arden," playing at the Majestic Theatre. Nothing, however, could be further from the Patsy O'Connell type, in her little green cape of the green-room scene, of her brown suit and velour hat of the "Duke's daughter" in disguise than the figure which Miss Valentine made, on the stage of the theatre after the curtain had gone down.

She sat by the marble topped table of act three, just as Patsy does in the play, on a horsehair chair with a tidy on the back, in a room whose walls are hung with chromos and framed mottos, but dressed in a one-piece Russian frock and the most Parisian of black hats, she was a distinctly urban and un-Irish figure.

In this outfit she did a bit of rehearsing, making changes in certain of the scenes, for though the spectator would not think it, so lively is the performance, "Seven Miles to Arden" is seeing the light this week for the first time on any stage.

Miss Valentine playing the wheezy little organ in her Paris clothes and wrestling with the burglar made a pretty sight to a non-professional eye, but the mood she [illegible] was [illegible] of Patsy and [illegible] brought out the very [illegible] that captivated Billy Burgess in the play.

Many Publishers Prepare to Remove Plants West; Printers Ask for 32-Hour Week

By Universal Service.

New York, Oct. 1[illegible].—The controversy between certain local unions and their international unions over the demands of the former, which include a week of from [illegible] to 44 hours and an increase of $14 a week, with double and triple pay for overtime to take effect armistice day, has closed every magazine printing establishment in New York city.

Some of the local unions have retained their membership in their international union while the pressmen, feeders and paper handlers are reported to have seceded and struck.

The publishers of the magazines meanwhile have no choice but to suspend until the unions settle their differences. This means that McClure's, Collier's Weekly, Pictorial Review, Cosmopolitan, Hearst's Magazine, Metropolitan, Scribner's, Century, Munsey's, Popular, Delineator, Everybody's, McCall's, Popular Science Monthly, Vogue, Vanity Fair, Motion Picture Magazine and 1[illegible] others, together with many of the largest trade papers in the country will not appear at the usual time.

"Some of the publishers are making plans to remove their plants from New York to other places, and many Western cities are bidding vigorously to induce these publishers to consider their particular localities. Three very large publications have already completed plans for permanent removal and their printing machinery and paper supply is now being shipped to Chicago."

POWERFUL PILE REMEDY DISCOVERED

Has Never Failed to End Most Obstinate Case of Piles in Few Days.

For years it has been proved that so-called external remedies applied to or inserted in the rectum cannot cure piles, and at the best can only give temporary relief. Surgical operations also do not remove this cause, but simply the formation.

This wonderful prescription, known as Miro Pile Remedy, is so efficient in the treatment of piles that even chronic cases of from 20 to 30 years standing with profuse bleeding have been completely relieved in from three to ten days. Think of it. Just a few doses of this carefully balanced prescription and the most persistent case of piles is absorbed never to return.

The W. B. Hunt Co. of Cambridge and Roxbury Crossing dispense Miro, or can get it for you on short notice. Surely it's worth the little trouble to obtain it to be rid of piles forever.

IMPORTANT—What is known as itching piles are not piles in the true sense of the word, although this condition may accompany a true case of piles. For this condition Miro Pile Ointment has been prepared, as in such cases it is not necessary to take the internal prescription.—Advertisement.

Hyomei is the one treatment for nose, throat and lung troubles. It does not contain cocaine, morphine or other dangerous drug and does away with stomach dosing. Just breathe it through the little pocket inhaler that comes with each outfit.

A complete outfit costs but little at any reliable druggist and Hyomei is guaranteed to banish catarrh, croup, coughs, colds, sore throat and bronchitis or money back. A Hyomei inhaler lasts a life time and extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained from druggists for a few cents.

ADVERTISE IN AMERICAN FOR BEST RESULTS

CLASS WARFARE THREAT SEEN BY CECIL

Strike Phenomenon Should Warn Both America and Britain, He Says

By Universal Service.
Special Cable Dispatch.

London, Oct. 10.—"It would be absurd to deny that anti-British feeling exists in America, but I am sure that no anti-American feeling exists in this country," said Lord Robert Cecil, addressing a gathering of American correspondents here.

Lord Robert then declared incidentally that Britain had just aided America by the result of the great railway strike here.

DISCUSSES R. R. STRIKE.

"The good temper and tolerance displayed by both sides was amazing," he said. "The most remarkable thing about the strike was the introduction into it of fourteen leaders of other unions. If three weeks ago anyone had said that such action by leaders of other unions would have stopped the strike of a great union he would have been deemed a person of lively imagination.

"That was the most encouraging feature of the whole transaction. [illegible] we must not be foolish. We had a very serious warning. [illegible] I will say that the people will not [illegible] revolution but we would be very foolish to ignore the [illegible] a certain section of labor opinion towards an attitude of very serious [illegible]

"This is not an ordinary strike. There was no question of depriving the [illegible] of their profits. The [illegible] adopted were [illegible] by one section of the population against another section in order to put forward the interests of the blockading party in an [illegible] dispute.

WARNS OF CLASS HATRED.

"This is really a very serious phenomenon, important both for America and England. There were people on both sides who were extreme and who were ready and anxious for a class war.

"We should take this as a warning. It is our business not only to avoid class warfare but as far as we can to remove all subjects of class antagonism. As one labor leader said the demand of labor was that they should be raised to the status of partners. I believe that to be profoundly true.

"It was not a question of higher wages but the demand for a higher status—the status of partnership. I welcome that demand and I believe in this country and others there will be a frank acceptance of the soundness and justice of this central principle.

"I believe that what happens in one country cannot fail to have a great effect upon other countries."

HARVARD SQUAD IS GIVEN REGULAR DAY OF EASE

Light work was to be the order of the day in the Stadium football Harvard may surprise Colby tomorrow by its fast passing game. The team has been practicing forward tosses, and with C[illegible] and Felton on the directing end have shown some big gains. Ryan, Faxon and Crocker are the more versatile of the wings in catching the passes.

The freshmen proved soft opponents for the varsity and three touchdowns were made in fifteen minutes. The cubs were given the ball on the varsity fifteen and then five-yard line but couldn't shove it across.

Eddie Casey got in his customary thirty-yard run and it produced a touchdown after Gratwick gained twenty yards in three rushes. A seventy-yard run by Fred Church brought another touchdown and a third was scored by Red Steele.

The freshmen stopped the varsity once after a forward pass was missed by one of the regular wings and another touchdown was prevented when Steele went behind the cubs goal [illegible] as one of the varsity forwards was detected holding.

Mike Brady and George Bowden will stack up against Gil Nichols and George McLean in a four-ball match at Great Neck next Sunday.

This is McLean's home course and if George is in his well-known form such as he showed at the recent professional tourney, Brady and Bowden will have their hands full.

Frank Morrissey, Boston College's veteran guard, at present out of the game for a slight operation, will be back in time for the Holy Cross game November 25. It was feared that he was lost to the team for the season and his promised return is good news, as Coach Frank W. Cavanaugh plans to have his eleven at full strength for the struggle with the purple.

BOX FIGHTERS GLAD SERIES IS OVER

By JACK CONWAY

[illegible] box fighters [illegible] meeting [illegible] one of those [illegible] places [illegible] passed a vote of thanks [illegible] [illegible]

It [illegible] right [illegible] the [illegible] of the dream [illegible] feet for a lot of low brow ball players to be getting their family skeletons exposed in the papers every day when there are a lot of noble glove men who like to have their friends read about them.

At any rate the boxers are [illegible] and they don't care who knows [illegible] [illegible] make the acquaintance of guys who like to buy athletes [illegible] [illegible] clothes and such things.

[illegible] White Sox.

Said gent had bet [illegible] on the Reds [illegible] if our experience with such things as oil wells means anything.

Bob McReady will lead the [illegible] drive with a bang-up show at the Commercial A. C. tonight. [illegible] Josephs, South End featherweight, and Chick Hayes of Indianapolis are booked to meet in the feature bout of twelve rounds.

It will be the fourth meeting between this pair. As each of their former bouts was crowded with enough [illegible] to satisfy [illegible] the most critical of the fans, there is sure to be a big crowd on hand to witness the festivities. The [illegible] now stands one victory for Josephs and two draws.

Josephs will probably rule a slight favorite for tonight's encounter. He has youth, strength and a punch in his favor. He has been one of the most consistent winners performing in New England rings. [illegible] of New York is the only boxer who has been able to dispose of the South End boy.

Hayes has had more experience than Josephs. He is also a slightly better boxer than the local lad. As a result, he'll not lack for backers when he goes to the post this p. m.

Frank Tillo, North End lightweight will try to dispose of Girard [illegible] of Lawrence in the semi-final contest of eight rounds.

Johnny Dundee arrived in Boston early today to complete training for his twelve-round bout with Young Kloby which will be staged by the Atlas Club of Lawrence Monday afternoon. Johnny Cuddy, matchmaker of this organization, has the backing of the Army and Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control. He is the only New England promoter licensed by the national body.

Dundee realizes he will have to be at his best to outpoint Kloby. The latter will enter the ring at [illegible] pounds [illegible] vantage. Dundee, however, has fought plenty of [illegible] in his day and he is not worrying about the outcome of the battle. He believes his speed and skill will enable him to keep out of the way of Kloby's punch while he outpoints his opponent.

The bout will be staged in a new arena which is built in circular form. There will be 6000 seats on the ground, while the bleachers will [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] Cuddy in charge of the show [illegible] will not be any [illegible] to the bout.

Pop O'Brien of Philadelphia will probably be the third man in the ring as Cuddy says he has been unable to come to terms with Larry Conley whom he desired as referee.

This game [illegible] all probability is the last that ever will be played in any World's Series. If the club owners and those who have the interests of the game at heart have listened [illegible] ing this series they will call off the annual inter-league contests. In one respect the dope was right. The White Sox declared last night that if Eller pitched they would hit him hard. They did. In fact they would have scored many runs but for the fact that the Reds beat [illegible] [illegible] the White Sox [illegible]

WILLIAMS DID IT

Better Club Beaten in Series, Says Gleason.

By KID GLEASON.

Manager Chicago White Sox.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—There isn't a thing in the world to do but take [illegible] hat to Pat Moran and his Reds. They are world's champions [illegible] I want to say right away that they beat the greatest ball [illegible] that ever went into a world's series. Maybe we didn't play the kind of baseball we should have played, but I feel certain that I had the [illegible] of all time and Moran's team beat us.

[illegible] Cincinnati. For two days down there it was the same kind of a team that I had in the field this Summer. No team in the world could beat such a team as that. Lefty Williams had been beaten twice but I believe he is [illegible]

LEAD TOO GREAT.

But they hopped away with a four-run lead in the first round and from then on had such a commanding lead that we couldn't go out and do [illegible]

[illegible] ship was to have Williams go through. He didn't do it. I don't know what was the matter with him. He hasn't pitched one decent game in the series and he was the boy that was largely instrumental in the White Sox winning the pennant. I thought he would go through this [illegible] control.

YOUNGSTER DID WELL

[illegible] play had they backed [illegible] basis. Or rather the boys behind him would have won the game for him. Wilkinson would have made a couple of runs in that game if he had been on the [illegible] start.

[illegible] a bunch of ball players going at their top speed and they missed no chance to give us trouble. And they beat us five games to three.

BETTER TEAM BEATEN.

But regardless of that I still maintain that Moran beat the greatest ball club that ever went into the World's Series. Maybe my fellows were a bit too confident in the early [illegible] with the series.

Victorious Reds to Get $5,270.11 Each From Series

Each of the twenty-two Cincinnati players eligible for the World's Series is to receive $5,207.11 for winning. Each of the twenty-four Chicago players will get $3,254.36. Schreiber and Lee of the Reds are to be given half shares.

National Champion Hayes Beaten at Legion Games

At the American Legion games at Braves Field some of the foremost stars of the track world competed. Billy Hayes, the national "100" champ, after winning his trial heat, was forced to yield in this event to the handicap men. Mike Devanney, the New York flier and Jake Driscoll, the local crack, furnished the thrill of the afternoon by their neck-and-neck race in a driving finish by three yards in the remarkable time of 1m. 55s.

Marc Wright and R. W. Harwood each cleared twelve feet in the pole vault but the prize went to the former Dartmouth star because of the two [illegible] handicap. W. J. Dempsey of Boston College won the broad jump.

REDS SHOW OLD PEP IN FINAL

White Sox Dazed by Sudden Attack in the Last Battle

By NICK FLATLEY.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The old attack returned, and with it the pep and confidence, and so the Cincinnati Reds rode on a wave of base knocks into baseball's highest honor. The old attack and confidence and everything had been missing for two days, and more than 30,000 Chicago fans came out to watch their Sox rampage along.

They saw them, but their surge came too late, came after the Red's had built up ten runs and were fooling with the ball game. But the Kidgleason outfit fought gamely down to the bitter finish and had the Reds running around in circles through the final two innings while the great crowd was in turmoil, the biggest uproar of the series.

Hod Eller and his shine ball won the ultimate glory, but the glittering agate was pounded very ingloriously in the last two rounds. The series was merely a matter of a base hit at one spot even though the Reds were out in front by five runs at the time. And to Eddie Roush, who had gummed things up a few minutes before by muffing an easy fly, came the chance of diving at a hard liner. He dove fearlessly, came up with the marble, and Chicago's last opportunity was ruined, and the National League won the world's title the first since the Braves came through in 1914.

CAME IN THE NINTH.

The spectacular clutch came in the ninth, after the Sox had battered four runs across in the eighth. Pinch-hitter Murphy had been hit and Eller was winging while the Moran reliefs were madly warming up in the bull-pen. Leibold hit between right and centre. With any other fielder out there it would have gone for a blow, but Roush just naturally saved the winner's end for himself and his gang, and knocked the club owners out of what little money might have been taken in had the teams returned to Cincinnati.

There was a big turnout, but it was merely a tribute to the gameness of the Sox for coming back and snatching two games after they apparently had been buried beyond excavation. Chicago is a game baseball metropolis just as game as Boston, which is saying a mouthful, as you know.

LONG SERIES FLIVVERED.

The nine-game series was knocked flatter than a sidewalk as all the baseball officials here admitted, and they're all here or were yesterday, anyhow. Seven games is enough, and the popular bankroll cannot be stretched too far. The magnates did profit to the tune of $91,000 by this final joust, but had not the conditions been just as they were the attendance would have been as meagre as it was that last terrible day in Redland.

But returning to the baseball part of things, those Reds jumped Lefty Williams the minute he stepped onto the hill. Daubert, Groh, Roush, and Duncan hit the ball right under the guns, and the portsider and the game went right into the dugout then and there.

BLEW IN EIGHTH.

All the dash and fire of the Reds returned, and remained until the eighth when they blew wide open in the face of the game but too late for a Sox assault. Big Bill James was hammered for runs, and so was Wilkinson who succeeded. Eller had his ball turning corners and somersaults and things and a long home run that Joe Jackson crashed out in the third was the only dent in Hod's armor.

He showed his heart in the right place in the opening round when Eddie Collins and Liebold assailed him with torrid hits. He steamed up and got Weaver, Jackson and Felsch in order, which is some stunt for any pitcher. He was, of course, working on the four-run lead piled up by his gang just before, but even with that he knew he was up against it once the Alabaster Hose got a few markers and a chance for more.

WILLIAMS STAR DENIES R. P. I. CHARGES

Williamstown, Oct. 10.—Much indignation is felt here over the charges made by Coach Reed of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute that Benny Boynton, Williams football captain, enrolled at R. P. I. for several days prior to the recent game between the two institutions and brought back valuable information regarding signals and plays, thus enabling the Purple to capture the victory.

Boynton admits paying a visit to Rensselaer but says that his identity was known to many of the students and he remained but one afternoon. He attended football practice, which was not secret. He makes an emphatic denial that he learned the R. P. I. signals.

Williams plays Cornell tomorrow at Ithaca, and the Purple squad left today on the trip. The hardest game of the schedule is looked for.

Coach Brooks's charges hope to repeat their performance of two years ago, when Cornell was beaten.

Carick and Beckett, who were both injured in the Union game a week ago, have taken things easy this week and it is hoped that they will be in condition to play.

The Williams lineup has not been announced, but it is expected to be about the same as in previous games.

BOSTON HORSES WIN AT COMBINATION PARK

Frank Fox, the veteran trainer, took the measure of the 2.21 trotters with Revelry, the black gelding owned by W. W. Sprague, who passes most of his time down on Blackstone street, while second place went to the bay mare, Violet T., owned by Taylor Brothers of Medford.

First in the 2:15 trot was won by Baroness Chelsea, whose owner, C. C. Pendergast, hangs his hat up in Roxbury during business hours, while Bill Gentry, the steed with which Lester Dore copped the 2.17 pace, is the property of E. B. Phillips of Swampscott.

The Full Moon and the Tides

TODAY the moon is full, and this happens when she is near her point of closest approach to the earth, called her perigee. Since her power to produce ocean tides is greater when she is nearest, and since at the phase of full moon the sun's tidal force acts in a line with the moon's, the coincidence with the full phase makes tides.

Very Unusual Plot of Love and Revenge

THE WICKED MARQUIS

Scene Is Laid in Old Ancestral Estate

Oppenheim's New Novel Portrays an English Aristocrat of the Old School and a Most Engaging Sinner

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM,

[illegible] of Many of the Most Widely-Read and Thrilling Stories of the Present Day

What Has Happened So Far

The Marquis of Mandeleys, an English nobleman of a type of days gone by, finds himself nearly bankrupt from law cases against the occupant of a cottage on his estate, who refuses to vacate his own property. The Marquis' solicitor informs him that the sum of eighteen thousand pounds is needed to settle the court bills and that it would be useless to make another appeal even to the House of Lords. A young woman speaks to the Marquis in the grill room of the Savoy and [illegible] David Thain, a young American millionaire protege of the Duchess, is introduced to the Marquis, who explains to the family his trouble with the cottage owner, Vont. Thain tells of crossing the ocean with a man of that name.

THE girl inherited her mother's superiority of station and intellect and was naturally unhappy. I noticed her with interest, and she responded. Consequences which in the days of our ancestors, Mr. Thain, would have been esteemed an honor to the persons concerned, ensued. Richard Vont, like an ignorant clodhopper, viewed the matter from the wrong standpoint. . . . You said something, I believe? Pardon me. I sometimes fancy that I am a little deaf in my left ear."

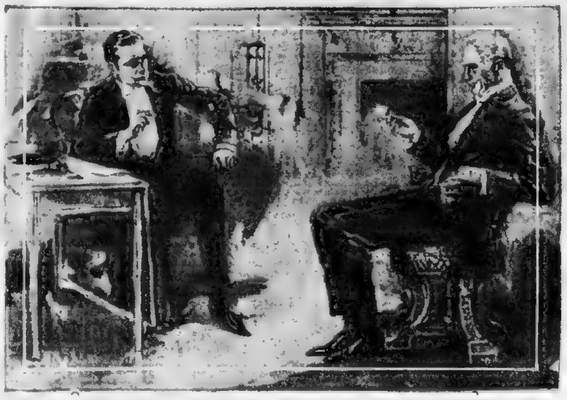
"So far," his host went on, "the story contains no novel features. I exercised what my ancestors, in whose spirit I may say that I live, would have claimed as an undoubted right. Richard Vont, as I have said, with his inheritance of ill-bestowed education, and a measure of that extraordinary socialistic poison which seems, during the last few generations, to have settled like an epidemic in the systems of the agricultural classes, resented my action. His behavior became so intolerable that I was forced to dismiss him from my service, and finally, to avoid a continuance of melodramatic scenes, which were extremely unpleasant to every one concerned, I was obliged to leave England for a time and travel upon the [illegible]."

"And in the meantime, what happened at Mandeleys?" David Thain asked.

"Richard Vont and his nephew appear to have left for the United States very soon after my own departure from England. The cottage was left in the care of an elderly relative, who gave little trouble but much annoyance. She attended a Primitive Methodist Chapel in the village, and she passed both myself and the ladies of my household at all times without obeisance."

"Dear me!" David Thain murmured under his breath.

"After her death, I instructed my lawyers to examine the legal title to the Vont property and to see whether there was any chance of regaining it. Its value would be, at the outside, say six or seven hundred pounds. I advertised and offered two thousand, five hundred pounds to regain it. My solicitors came into touch with the man Vont through an agent in America. His reply to their propositions on my behalf does not bear repetition. I then instructed my lawyers to take such steps as they could to have the deed of gift set aside, sufficient compensation, of course, being promised. That must have been some eight years ago. My efforts have come to an end today. The cottage remains the property of Richard Vont. My own law costs have been considerable, but by some means or other this man Vont has contrived to defend his property at the expenditure of some five or six thousand pounds. One can only conclude that he must have prospered in this strange country of yours, Mr. Thain."



"Richard Vont was head-keeper at Mandeleys when I succeeded to the title and estates."

"To a stranger," the latter observed, "it seems curious that this man should have set so high a value upon a property which must be full of painful associations to him."

"The very arguments I made use of in our earlier correspondence," his host assented. "I have told you the story, Mr. Thain, because it occurred to me that this man might have communicated to you his reason for returning after all these years to the neighborhood."

"He told me nothing."

"Then I have wasted your time with a long and, I fear, a very dull story," the Marqui apologized gracefully. "Shall we join the others?"

"There was just one question, if I might be permitted," David Thain said, [illegible] to ask concerning the story which you have told me. The girl to whom you alluded—Vont's daughter—what became of her?"

The Marquis for a moment stood perfectly still. He had just risen to his feet and was standing where a gleam of sunlight fell upon his cold and passionless features. His silence had, in its way, a curious effect. He seemed neither to be thinking nor hesitating. He was just in a state of suspense. Presently he leaned forward and knocked the ash from his cigarette into the grate.

"The lady in question," he replied, "has found that place in the world to which her gifts and charm entitle her. I fear that my sister will be getting impatient. My daughter too, I am sure, would like to improve her acquaintance with you, Mr. Thain."

Davivd Thain was, in his way, an obstinate and self-willed man, but he found himself, for those first few moments, subject to his host's calm but effectual closure of the conversation. Nevertheless, he recovered himself in time to ask that other question as they left the room.

"The lady is alive, then?"

"She is alive," the Marquis acquiesced, in a colorless tone.

A servant threw open the door of the drawing room. The Marquis motioned to his guest to precede him.

"As I imagined," he murmured, "I see that my sister is impatient. You will forgive me, Caroline," he went on, turning to the Duchess. "Mr. Thain's conversation was most interesting. Letitia, my dear, do press Mr. Thain to dine with us one evening. This afternoon I fear that I have been unduly loquacious. I should welcome another opportunity of conversing with him concerning his wonderful country."

Letitia picked up a little morocco-bound volume from the table and consulted it. Sir Robert drew the prospective guest a little on one side.

"For heaven's sake," he whispered, "don't give the Marquis any financial tips. He has a fancy that he is destined to restore the fortunes of the Mandeleys on the Stock Exchange. He is a delightfully ornamental person, but I can assure you that as a father-in-law he is a distinct luxury."

David Thain smiled grimly.

"I shall be careful," he promised.

CHAPTER IV.

THE Marquis devoted the remainder of that afternoon, as he did most others, to paying a call. Very soon indeed after David Thain's departure, he left the house, stepped into the motor car which was waiting for him, and, with a little nod to the chauffeur which indicated his indulgence in a customary enterprise, drove off towards Battersea. Here he descended before a large block of flats overlooking the gardens, stepped into the lift and, without any direction to the porter, was let out upon the sixth floor. He made his way along the corridor to a little mahogany front door, on which was a brass plate inscribed with the name of Miss Marcia Hannaway. He rang the bell and was at once admitted by a very trim parlormaid, who took his hat and cane and ushered him into a remarkably pleasant little sitting room. A woman, seated before a typewriter, held out two ink-stained hands towards him with a little laugh.

"I've been putting a ribbon in," she confessed. "Did you ever see such a mess! Please make yourself comfortable while I go and wash."

The Marquis glanced with a slight frown at the machine, and, taking her wrists, stooped down and kissed them slightly.

"My dear Marcia," he expostulated, "is this necessary?"

She shook her head with a droll smile.

"Perhaps if it were," she confessed, "I should hate to do it. There's a Nineteenth Century on the sofa. You can read my article."

She hurried out of the room, from which she was absent only a very few moments. The Marquis, with a finger between the pages of the review which he had been reading, looked up as she re-entered. She was a woman of nameless gifts, of pleasant if not unduly slim figure. Her forehead was perhaps a little low, her eyes brilliant and intelligent, her mouth large and exceedingly mobile. She was not above the allurements of dress, for her house gown, with its long tunic trimmed with light fur, was of fashionable cut and becoming. Her fingers, cleansed now from the violet stains, were shapely, almost elegant. She threw herself into an easy chair opposite her visitor, and reached out her hand for a cigarette.

"Well," she asked, "and how has the great trial ended?"

"Adversely," the Marquis confessed.

"You foolish person," she sighed, lighting the cigarette and throwing the match away. "Of course you were bound to lose, and I suppose it's cost you no end of money."

Somewhat Depressed.

"I believe," he admitted, a little stiffly, "that my lawyers are somewhat depressed at the amount."

She smoked in silence for a moment.

"So he will go back to Mandeleys. It is a queer little fragment of life. What on earth does he want to do it for?"

"Obstinacy," the Marquis declared—"sheer, brutal, ignorant obstinacy."

"And the boy?" she asked, pursuing her own train of thought. "Have you heard anything of him?"

"Nothing. To tell you the truth, I have made no inquiries. Beyond the fact that it seems as though for the present Richard Vont will have his way, I take no interest in either of them."

She nodded thoughtfully.

"If only we others," she sighed, "could infuse into our lives something of the marvelous persistence of these people whom in other respects we have left so far behind!"

"My dear Marcia," he protested, "surely, with your remarkable intelligence, you can see that such persistence is merely a form of narrow-mindedness. Your father has shut in his life and driven it along one narrow groove. To you every day brings its fresh sensation, its fresh object. Hence, coupled, of course, with your natural gifts—your success. The person who thinks of but one thing in life must be indeed a dull dog."

"Very excellent reasoning," she admitted. "Still, to come back to this little tragedy—for it is a tragedy, isn't it?—have you any idea what he means to do when he gets to Mandeleys?"

"None at all!"

"Let me see," she went on, "it is nineteen years ago last September, isn't it?—nineteen years out of the middle of his life. Will he sit in the garden and brood, I wonder, or has he brought back with him some scheme of mediaeval revenge?"

"There was a time," the Marquis reflected, "when several of my Irish tenants used to shoot at me every Saturday night from behind a hedge. It was not in the least a dangerous operation, and I presume it brought them some relief. With Vont, however, things would be different. I remember him distinctly as a most wonderful shot."

"Psychologically," Marcia Hannaway observed, "his present action is interesting. If he had shot you or me in his first fit of passionate resentment, everything would have been in order, but to leave the country, nurse a sullen feeling of revenge for years, and then come back, seems curious. What shall you do when you see him sitting in his garden?"

"I shall address him," the Marquis replied. "I fear that his long residence in such a country as America will have altered him considerably, but it is of course possible that the instincts of his class remain."

"How feudal you are!" she laughed.

The Marquis frowned slightly. Although this was the one person in the world whom he felt was necessary to him, who held a distinct place in his very inaccessible heart, there were times when he entertained a dim suspicion that she was making fun of him. At such times he was very angry indeed.

Still Hoping

"In any case," he said, "we will not waste our time in speculating upon this man's attitude. I am still hoping that I may be able to devise means to render his occupancy of the cottage impossible."

"I should like to hear about the boy."

"If," the Marquis promised, "I find Vont's attitude respectful, I will make inquiries."

"When are you going to Mandeleys?" she asked.

"I am in no hurry to leave London," he replied.

"When you go," she told him, "I have made up my mind to take a little holiday. I thought even of going to the South of France."

The lines of her companion's forehead was slightly elevated.

"My dear Marcia," he protested gently, "is that like you? The class of people who frequent the Riviera at this time of the year——"

She laughed at him delightfully.

"Oh, you foolish person!" she interrupted. "If I go, I shall go to a tiny little boarding house, or take a villa in one of the quiet places—San Raphael, perhaps, or one of those little forgotten spots between Hyeres and Cannes. Phillis Grant would go with me. She isn't going to act again until the Autumn season."

Her visitor's expression was a little blank.

To Be Continued.

THIN PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances

The average person is beginning to realize more and more that the lack of physical strength and nerve exhaustion (frequently evidenced by excessive thinness) are the direct cause not only of the failure to succeed in life's struggle for the necessities of existence, but also for the handicap in one's social aspirations. Compare the thin, sickly, angular frame with the well-rounded form which is usually accompanied by the bloom of health and attractiveness.

That millions of people are conscious of this handicap is evident from the continued appearance in newspapers and magazines of many suggestions proposing various remedies in form of medicine or exercises, either of which might or might not be applicable in a given case.

Authorities, however, agree that healthy nerve tissue is absolutely essential to a strong, robust body and mind. Weak nerves, whether induced by a multitude of different symptoms, immediately and generally result in lack of energy, sleeplessness, irritability, depression, [illegible] tions gradually consume the healthy flesh leaving ugly hollows, a flat chest, bony neck and scrawny arms and legs.

The essential phosphoric food elements in Bitro-Phosphate, assimilated by the nerve cells, [illegible] a pleasing change in nerve energy and hence increased vitality and strength. With the burdens of nervousness, sleeplessness, lack of energy, etc., lifted, normal weight with its attractive fullness and ruddy glow of health replaces the former picture of skin and bones.

Miss Georgia Hamilton, who was once thin and frail, reporting her own experience, writes: "Bitro-Phosphate has brought a magic transformation with me. I gained 15 pounds and never before felt so well."

CAUTION.—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unexcelled for the relief of nervousness and attendant disorders, owing to its tendency to increase weight, one should watch the scales when taking it unless it is the desire to put on flesh.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER CLXXXIV.

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

OUR first home in the Walgrave had been only a little court room, yet for a moment I thought of it with regret when I [illegible] had taken for [illegible]. Then the glowing mass of red roses caught my eye and warmed my heart. Even if Jim couldn't be with me on the evening of our return, he had remembered the morning's moment of tenderness and the flowers were sent to tell me that it he'd the same promise for him it had given me.

With a glow of happiness that brightened the whole room I buried my face in the fragrant mass, and as I laid so an envelope tucked under the vase caught my eye. I jerked out the little card it contained and read:

"Hail and farewell, dear lady tenant. All happiness wherever you abide."

There was no name on the card, but it was quite clear the flowers were from Tom Mason. From Tom Mason! And I had been so happy for a moment, dreaming they were from Jim!

Pretend Contentment

Then it became suddenly impossible to deceive even myself. I couldn't pretend that I was happy or even contented with things as they stood. Being Jim's "pal." Permitting him to go his own way while I went mine, watching him grow daily more absorbed in affairs of which I knew nothing, left my life empty of the one thing I needed to make it rich and full—love.

I sank down in a chair and stared accusingly at the beautiful red roses which would have made me so happy if only they had come from the right man—from my Jim.

The last two hours had been a series of disappointments. First there was Neal's refusal to give one inch, to abate one jot of his—I had to confess it—justifiable animosity toward the Harrisons. Then the curt message that business would keep Jim out 'till late—just when I was counting on the softening influence of our environment to right things between us. And now the flowers. Jim might so easily have thought of them—why did they have to come from Tom Mason?

"This loveless existance isn't natural. I can't stand it!" I said grimly and aloud.

Then I got up and hurried into the bedroom. There were Jim's suitcase and my little black bag. I unpacked my possessions and jammed them hastily into the gray enamel bureau. Then I carefully divested myself of the hat and coat I was still wearing, slipped off my dress and folded my kimono cosily about me.

When at last I had made myself as fine as possible I hurried out to the elevator and down to the main dining room. At the door the suave captain stopped me:

"Madame expects friends?" he asked. "Madame is looking for her party?"

"They aren't in this dining room," I stammered, more truthful in fact than in interest.

Then I fled. Back to my room I went and telephoned for [illegible] er.

Hurried to Bedroom

I managed to make a good dinner, dragging out the rite of eating as long as possible. Then I went [illegible] and rearranged Jim's neckties and collars with a meticulous effort. Next I telephoned the news stand for some magazines, and with them I established myself in my gray and rose elegance in the big living room.

I must have dozed, for when I woke with a start dawn was creeping in through the windows.

As I began to adjust myself to my surroundings the idea came to me that perhaps Jim had come in and thought it kind to let me sleep. Guiltily I rose and hurried into the bedroom. There was no sign of Jim. A sob of fear caught in my throat. And then my eye chanced to light on the china indicator under the telephone. It was illuminated with the words.

"There is a message in the office for you."

As I started toward the telephone my foot caught in the hem of my dress. I stumbled and fell. For a few minutes I lay huddled against the foot of the bed wondering stupidly and unhappily what the message might be. More excuses from Jim, of course. At last I rose wearily. After all there was nothing to do but phone down and see.

To Be Continued.

A Daily Recipe

By MONSIEUR CHARLES A. PERRAUDIN, Delmonico's Chef

Brook Trout a la Meuniere

Procure several four-ounce trout; scald, draw and season. Cut an incision on the thickest part of the filet, roll the fish in flour, heat some butter in a frying pan, lay in the trout, and let cook slowly for eight minutes on each side. Remove the fish in a dish and add a lump of fresh butter, a little anchovy paste, let take a nice brown color and add a little lemon juice. When very hot pour over the trout; sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve immediately.

Home Complexion Peeler Works Wonders

[illegible] face, neck [illegible] beautiful and youthful in appearance, the treatment which seems most sensible is one which will actually remove the skin itself immediately it begins to age, fade, coarsen or discolor. The only known treatment which will do this, so far from a painful, expensive surgical operation, is the application of ordinary mercolized wax, which is as harmless as it is effective.

The wax is put on at night just as [illegible] cream and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead and half dead surface skin in almost invisible particles, a little each day, no discomfort being experienced. With the disappearance of the old cuticle the new, healthier skin underneath gradually appears, richly beautiful with the flush of youth. This mercolized wax, which you can get at any drug store in original package, is indeed a veritable wonder-worker.—Advertisement.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

The Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

MARRIAGE is the point at which you cease elevating a man's soul, and begin cleaning his safety razor.

This is the time of year when a Summer girl begins wondering if any of the men to whom she became engaged in July are sufficiently "worth while" to invite to her January teas.

The average man will make more fuss over losing a golf ball or a collar button than he will over losing his reputation, his fortune or his soul.

Where, ah, where is the glorious Apollo who caused such a stir among feminine hearts as he dived six feet into the bounding surf last Summer? Probably standing with shivering reluctance, trying to work up the courage to turn on his cold shower bath, dearie!

Winning a husband is merely "beginner's luck," chances to win or lose.

Something of God's sunshine must seep through to the soul of the golfer—it's so hard to find a grouch, a dyspeptic or a pessimist among them.

Why do so many women seem to think nowadays that brains can be "Burbanked" inside of the head, simply by cutting off the hair on the outside?

Which IS the "weaker sex"—that sex which hasn't the strength to put the studs in its shirts and fix its own bath water? Or that sex which manages to do a hard day's work at a typewriter on the strength of a chocolate eclaire and a glass of ice cream soda?

Many a girl thinks a man "simply wonderful"—until she discovers that he thinks so, too.

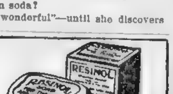
COUGHED THREE MONTHS

Relief in 24 Hours. Simple Home Medicine Did It.

Mr. H. C. Hoot, chief operator, F. C. R. R., Birmingham, Ala., writes:

"I tried your Mentho-Laxene for a cough and I find it the premier medicine for that ailment. I had a cough for three months and made me a syrup of your Mentho-Laxene and I got permanent relief in twenty-four hours, etc."

Mentho-Laxene is a richly concentrated mixture of wild cherry, Tolu, Grindelia, Menthoe Ammonium chloride Cascara, etc., sold by good druggists in 2½-ounce bottles. Mixed at home with simple syrup, it makes a full pint. A wonderful medicine, wonderfully cheap, and guaranteed most effective for colds, coughs, catarrh, hoarseness, difficult breathing, etc.—Advertisement.



If your skin itches just use Resinol

No remedy can honestly promise to heal every case of eczema or similar skin ailment. But Resinol Ointment, aided by Resinol Soap, gives such instant relief from the itching and burning, and so generally succeeds in clearing the eruption away for good, that it is the standard skin treatment of thousands and thousands of physicians. Why not try it?

Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. For sample of each, free, write to Dept. 3-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

HAIR SOON TOO SHORT TO DO UP

A little "Danderine" stops your hair coming out and doubles its beauty

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Help your hair to grow strong, thick and long and become soft, glossy and twice as beautiful and abundant.—Advertisement.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head, no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract before eating more food.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins, also to prevent their formation.—Advertisement.

Swift & Co., Libby and Swift International made small gains.

SEVEN ISSUES AT RECORD HIGHS

Coppers Improve in the Second Hour, While Steels Show Gains

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, with prices about at the top level of the morning. Seven issues sold at record highest prices, they being Fairbanks, Chandler, Stromberg, Kelly Springfield, Retail Stores, Mexican Petroleum and Pressed Steel Car. General Electric sold at its year's highest.

Coppers were more active and advanced in the second hour, gains in this group at 12 o'clock including Anaconda, 1⅛ at 70⅛. Inspiration, ex-dividend, 1 at 63 , and Utah Copper, 2½ at 86¼. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem B, Midvale and Republic had advanced from one to more than four points, the last-named showing the largest gain. Crucible was off a point. U. S. Steel and Bethlehem had been fractionally lower during the morning, but the whole market grew stronger in the latter part of the forenoon.

Atlantic Gulf was up more than six at noon and Chandler ten points, while other especially large gains were made by Keystone, Mexican Petroleum, Stromberg and Pressed Steel Car.

Transactions for the morning totalled 718,000 shares. Trading was mostly in small lots.

Demand Sterling opened at $4.18½. The first call money quotation was 8 per cent.

STOCKS HIGHER AT START.

Prices ruled a little higher at the opening and advances were made by a great majority of active issues on first sales. But specialties were the early feature, the best showing being by General Electric, Stromberg and Westinghouse. Fairbanks opened at its record highest in New York, as well as in Boston. Steels were steady and most of them made gains at once, but did not hold them long. Keystone was notably strong among tires and Southern Pacific among rails. Most oils began higher, but their gains were soon reduced to fractions. Motors were quiet and had a reactionary tendency for awhile. Stutz and General Motors receded several points. Tobaccos were strong as a class, with American Tobacco in the lead. Hesitancy characterized trading during the first half hour. Uncertainty as to what will develop in Washington is an influence as well as the money situation. The market remained strong in the main during the first hour, but had less breadth than before this week.

TRADERS CRITICIZE BANKERS.

Stating that the present behavior of call money is surprising Wall Street, it is also remarked in a communication from New York that traders are criticizing bankers. "Why," they ask, "are such excessive rates demanded when only a short while ago we were led to believe the money market was no longer a matter of concern."

It is said in explanation, however, that it is because they lack necessary reserves to meet the growing credit structure without recourse to rediscounting at the Federal Reserve Bank, that banks have to exact excessive rates for Wall Street loans "whenever insistent demand for accommodations arises."

More Gold Going South

GREAT ACTIVITY IN LEADING OIL FIELDS

September was a month marked by great activity in oil fields, and developments reflected the increased demand for well products. If fields in this country continue production at the present rate the oil output for 1920 will approximate 400,000,000 barrels. Last month set a record for activity, and the Oil City Derrick table, showing completions, new production, dry holes and gas wells for all fields, except California, for that period is:

	Completions	Production	Dry	Gas

What Is Knowledge?

You May Not Agree With This Definition, but Reading It May Lead You to Think Up a Better One

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

What Henry Ford did not get a chance to say on the witness stand he finds opportunity to print in his newspaper.

In a recent number of the Dearborn Independent, "Mr. Ford's Own Page" is devoted to a discussion of Knowledge.

You will be interested to read what he has to say when he is unharassed by complexing questions and free of confusing interruptions.

You may disagree with him in part. You may endorse some of his opinions. At least what he says will lead you to think.

Here it is:

Some people are proud of their good looks. Others are proud of their social standing. Still others are proud of their wealth. Most people are proud of their ancestry, because it was good and honest. But it would be very easy to find a large class of people who are proud of what they know, proud of the knowledge that they have gathered; and they would not be confined to the so-called educated classes either.

There are many kinds of knowledge, and it depends on what crowd you happen to be in, or how the fashions of the day happen to run, which kind of knowledge is most respected at the moment. There are fashions in knowledge just as there are in everything else.

When some of us were lads, knowledge used to be limited to Bible knowledge. But nowadays it is doubtful whether deep acquaintance with the Bible would be sufficient to win a man a name for learning. Although it must be said that knowledge of that Book would indicate a well-stored mind, it would not win much respect among the wiseacres of the day, because fashions in knowledge have changed.

Knowledge is something that somebody once knew and left in a form which enabled anyone else, who wanted to, to know it.

The only reason every man does not know everything that the human mind has ever learned is that no one has ever yet found it worth while to know that much.

Men satisfy their minds more by finding out things for themselves than by heaping together the things which somebody else has found out.

You can go out and gather knowledge all your life, and with all your gathering you will not catch up even with your own times.

You may fill your head with all the "facts" of all the ages and your head may be just an overloaded fact-box when you get through.

The point is this: Great piles of knowledge in the head are not the same as mental activity. A man may be very learned and very useless. And, then again, a man may be unlearned and very useful.

The object of education is not to fill a man's mind with facts; it is to teach him how to use his mind in thinking.

If Columbus had paid attention to "facts," if he had held them in reverence, if he had believed that all knowledge was in the books and there was none to be had outside the books, he would never have set sail. Columbus did not study geography; he made it.

Why, you could take a thousand men, fill each man's head full of knowledge—so full that he could learn no more—and even then no two of those men would be learned in the same things. Each would be calling the other ignorant. Merely gathering knowledge that other men have acquired may become the most useless work a man can do. The only fair standard by which accumulated knowledge may be judged is this: Here is a lot of knowledge. Are you capable of learning it? If you are capable, you are an intelligent person. If you are not capable, you are not. If this or that subject were submitted to you to be learned, you could learn it. Left to yourself, perhaps, you would not learn it, not because you are incapable of learning it, but simply because it is not the kind of knowledge that your life or genius requires.

Of course, if you want to gather knowledge, like pebbles and exhibit it, all right. That is one form of human vanity. But to flatter yourself that you are learned while the man who does not follow you far is unlearned is to add a vicious flavor to your self-flattery.

The best thing a book does for a man is to make him think. All that a school can do for a man is to teach him how to think.

It isn't what you get out of a book, but what a book pulls out of you, that makes books useful.

A man is like a well. There is a lot in him, if he can only get it out. Sometimes a book, or a conversation or a course of instruction, acts on him like priming on a pump—it brings out of him what is in him. And that is all that education means.

A man is like wood or stone. Some kinds of stones you can bring to a high degree of polish. Some kinds of wood, too. But many indispensable stones are rough and cannot be brought to a polish. So with some kinds of wood. All men do not take a polish. Webster did; but Lincoln didn't. And it is a big mistake to say that the polish counts for all. It is the texture that counts. And the texture of a man is his vitality, his energy, his character, his courage and his rock-bottom brain power.

Do American Women Overdress?

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

A woman speaking to a convention of women in New York makes the charge, and she did not intend it as a compliment, that American women imitate royalty in their dress.

Her exact statement was that her American sisters tried to look like duchesses.

If it was a good-looking duchess, a stylish duchess, a duchess who showed good taste, why should anybody object to the imitation?

But as a matter of fact the American woman does not imitate anybody. She is a law unto herself.

She does not ape royalty nor accept the dictates of anybody as to the way she shall dress, as to the jewels she shall wear, as to her shoes or her bonnet nor anything between.

The most accurate way in which to judge the taste of American women is to consult the authority from which the best dressed of them draw their ideas and get their inspirations.

The leading fashion magazine of the country is Harper's Bazar, a monthly publication devoted exclusively to the interests of women and sounding the latest note in the development of fashion.

A careful examination of the October number, filled with illustrations and speaking the last word in style, does not show a single picture which indicates the overdressing with which American women are charged.

The American woman of today is the best-dressed woman in the world. She is more strict in her recognition of the dictates of true taste, more particular in her avoidance of extremes and more quiet in the display of the possibilities of her purse than the women of any other country.

While Harper's Bazar pictures the fashions for the Fall and Winter there is not a dress shown of the extreme brevity at top and bottom which the cables have said was the vogue in Paris.

The well-dressed American woman listens to the gossip of European dress centres and then decides for herself. She adopts only such suggestions as seem to her likely to add to her attractiveness and throws the bizarre and extreme into the discard.

To charge American women of dressing like duchesses is to compliment the royal ladies on their good taste.

More Truth Than Poetry

SIX TO ONE

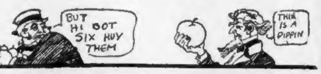
By S. E. KISER

FRIEND, are you willing to say to your neighbor
  That he ought to have six votes while you have but one?
Whether he's rich or a man who must labor,
  Whatever he's doing today or has done,
And whatever you do or are trying to do, are
  You ready to bow to him,
  Glad to kow-tow to him,
Because he insists that he's better than you are?

IF Bragg owns six houses in six scattered counties,
  And your house is worth more than the six that he claims,
Are you willing to grant that he ought to have bounties
  That will aid him to jumble your rights and your aims?
Because he has deeded himself his six places,
  Are you ready to say to him,
  As you give way to him:
"Deal me a two-spot, and you draw the aces?"

FRIEND, are you willing, whatever your station,
  To say that there's anywhere under the sun
A nation that's better or greater, a nation
  Exceeding our nation as six exceeds one?
Are you ready to stand with the people who tell us,
  Not softly, but spitefully,
  That we err frightfully
In being Americans, watchful and zealous?

IS it a shame to refuse to surrender
  The rank that our nation has held and should hold?
Is it time to begin to be humble and tender
  In yielding to those who are greedy and bold?
Are you willing to follow the ones who have shouted
  That we ought to be gibbeted
  For the nerve we've exhibited
In doubting as men whom we reverence doubted?



BUT HI GOT SIX HUY THEM
THIS IS A PIPPIN

UNFAIR JUDGMENT.

One of the women says the men ought to be compelled to wear long "pants" when they bathe. "No man," she explains, "has pretty legs." Why should she judge the legs of all men by the legs of the men whom she has seen at the bathing beaches?

THE HIGH COST OF CABBAGE.

How dear to my heart is the five-cent cigar,
  As fond recollection presents it to view;
Down my cheek a tear trickles, for it costs me three nickels,
  Or I hand out a quarter, perhaps, and get two.

AN UNDISTURBED PRIVILEGE.

If Mr. J. Bull won the war,
  Let not the pride we claim be lost;
Our glory is not ended, for
  We still may pay the price in cost.

Ye TOWNE GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By K. C. B.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 7.

DEAR K. C. B.—I wish very much to ask you a question. I am a girl, twenty-three years of age, and cannot find words to tell you how terribly homely I am, both of face and figure. I have quite the homeliest face that has yet been seen, you may be sure of that.

I have a very good position and am supposed to have brains, but how gladly I would exchange them for a small portion of the beauty of the countless sapheads who daily cross my path. Sometimes, when I catch my reflection in the mirror, the horror of it almost overwhelms me and I feel that I cannot go on. I know it hurts the other girls in the office to look at me.

Now, the question is this: Do you see any reason why I should go on living in a world where I meet only pitying glances? I have no one dependent upon me, and so would not be missed. And to add insult to injury I was christened Chestina. Even my employer never looks at me except when necessary. I wonder if you can possibly find anything to say to me that could make me desire to live? CHESTINA R.

MY DEAR Chestina.

WHEN I was a kid.

IN OUR town.

THERE WERE two girls.

WHO LIVED near us.

AND ONE of the girls.

WAS THE prettiest girl.

IN THE whole town.

AND WHENEVER I'd see her.

WITH ANOTHER boy.

I'D GO nearly mad.

AND I loved her so much.

THAT FOR days at a time.

I'D GO around.

WITH A high fever.

AND NO appetite.

AND THE other girl.

WAS THE homeliest girl.

IN THE whole town.

AND IF it hadn't have been.

THAT SHE had a brother.

AND I hit my head.

ON A window frame.

THAT JUST for a minute.

I DIDN'T know anything.

ON THE back of my head.

AND IT stained her hands.

AND HER clean white dress.

AND SHE didn't care.

AND THE pretty girl.

JUST STOPPED for a moment.

AND WENT away.

AND I heard her laugh.

IN THE game they played.

AND STRANGELY it seemed.

AND SO she remained.

THROUGH MY boyhood days.

I THANK you.

SHOULD GIRL BECOME AN OLD MAN'S DARLING?

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THERE are certain topics which are invariably discussed among groups of young people. The time-worn question is certain to come up, "Which would you rather be, an old man's darling or a young man's slave?" And since youth seeks youth, the answer is usually, "I would rather be a young man's darling."

However, I have had a letter from a girl whose preferences seem to run in the opposite direction.

"Dear Mrs. Woodrow," she writes, "for the past year a gentleman who is about twenty years my senior has been calling at my home as a friend of the family. He is a widower with four children, the eldest twelve and the youngest two. I love these children and I feel sure that my attachment to them is returned. The father has noticed my affection for them, and has taken a great interest in me.

Can Get Heart's Desires

"He has told me that he loves me, and that I alone can be a mother to the children and give them a good bringing up. I, in turn, think a great deal of this man. He is well-to-do, and can give me all my heart's desires. He has met many girls, but they seem to have no attraction for him. I am willing to make this sacrifice, if I can only make him happy.

"My mother does not object to my marriage to him, as she thinks he will make as good a husband as he has already proven himself a father.

"Do you think it would be right for me to marry this man who is so much older than myself? Any advice you may give me will be accepted with much gratitude.

"A TROUBLED GIRL."

If, as she says, the question of age is the sole barrier, I do not think she has much to worry about. If the case were reversed, and he was twenty and she forty, she might well pause and give the matter a good many second and even third thoughts. But what is a mere matter of twenty years on the right side between two people who have congenial tastes and care a great deal about each other? A man at forty is far from old, and some girls at twenty are more mature and settled than their years warrant. "A Troubled Girl" may be one of these.

Question in Nutshell

The man or men who created that sentence, "Marriage is not to be entered into lightly but soberly, advised and in the fear of God," put the whole much-discussed question in a nutshell, and probably spoke from the depths of experience.

A woman, when she achieves marriage—or has it thrust upon her—usually looks forward to motherhood; frequently she undertakes step-motherhood. In the latter case she is not facing new responsibilities; they are there ready-made for her. Whether she is a success in one of the most difficult of human relations depends upon her natural capabilities for the position.

Here is my correspondent. She meets a man who is congenial and companionable, and to whom she readily becomes attached. He can give her the sort of home she wishes and the things her heart desires. Those are all known factors. But the "X," the unknown factor is the children.

So far she has probably seen them on their best behavior. They probably look on her as a delightful companion and will, no doubt, eagerly welcome her. Has she got the tact and the patience and the real affection for them to retain her present attitude? Can she continue to do so even in childhood's most exasperating moments? For there will be exasperating moments and plenty of them; and these will be stern tests of her self-control.

It is also possible that she may have children of her own. In that case it may not always be easy to be equally kind and just to both sets. Only a very understanding and sympathetic person can successfully manage a group of children of differing temperaments and requirements.

The position of a stepmother is far from an enviable one. Every eye is wide open to see how she treats the children of a former marriage, and the relatives of the first wife are always ready to comment and criticize.

For Workingmen Only
The Bridegroom Got Drunk
Someone Else Got the Bride

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1919.

One thing men don't want is advice, especially when it isn't the kind that they want.

None the less, for organized working men, here is advice from one who has helped in many of their fights during thirty-five years past.

Don't act like a man in the valley of diamonds who got so excited he forgot to pick up any diamonds. And in your moment of prosperity, don't act like the bridegroom that got drunk, knew nothing for twenty-four hours, and woke up to find that somebody had kept sober and had run away with the bride.

Money is plentiful, work is plentiful, wages are good and will be better. Workers have long looked forward to their "innings." Their time has come, but some of them, through bad leadership or lack of leadership, are making impossible the reaping of the harvest.

The attitude of a certain group of magazine workers in New York running away from their organization, repudiating their leaders, asking what is literally impossible, is worse than foolishness in one group. It is harmful to all workers everywhere.

Three unions make a proposition to cut production by fifty per cent., and increase cost by sixty-five per cent. The thing can't be done. You might as well make a proposition to have the employers feed their men on peacock tongues, the employer to provide the peacocks. There are not enough peacocks; you may want them, but you won't get them.

More than one hundred and fifty magazines, supporting many thousands of workers, willing to pay them well, and promoting through advertising the employment of many thousands of other workers, are compelled to suspend publication, while different branches of labor organizations fight out their quarrels among themselves.

Workers should learn a lesson in leadership, from the war just ended.

War dragged four years with different leaders in the Allied armies and Germany under one leadership made constant headway.

Finally it occured to somebody that it would be a good idea for the Allies to adopt one policy and let one man carry it out. They chose Foch, he ruled. All obeyed, and you know the rest.

If workers deliberately ask what they know to be impossible, refuse all leadership, all authority, even authority delegated by themselves, they are bound to suffer in the long run. They may also injure others but that won't help them or their families.

Refusal to keep agreements will end the making of agreements.

Working men have struggled for years for the right to deal through agents selected by themselves. They throw away the work of years if they repudiate and laugh at their own agents.

Good wages will be due in future as they have in the past to good organization. There is no organization without keeping faith, sticking to the organization, living up to agreements, and following leaders properly chosen.

Workers fight their future, fight themselves and the national prosperity when they ignore laws that they themselves have made for the government of unions, and substitute anarchy for organization in their dealings with others.

What would workers say if they heard that farmers were to work only four, three or two hours a day? They would say: "If the farmers do that food will cost so much that we shall starve."

Every workman knows that the price of food depends on the amount of food produced by the farmers, that the price is really the price of the labor that extracts food from the soil.

What is true of farmers is true of all others.

One workman gets what another man produces. If a man cuts down what he produces below reasonable limits, he cuts down what the other man can get.

If a man demands what is impossible, he will not get it. He may persuade somebody to attempt the impossible, but it will only be an attempt.

Workmen should select their leaders, change them if they don't like them, but stick to them while they have them. You know what a handful of policemen properly led can do to a mob without any leaders.

The mob feels smart while it howls and throws stones, but it doesn't last.

If workmen cannot trust their present leaders, they should get other leaders and stick to them.

If they advertise the fact that they keep no rules, recognize no organization, stick to no agreements and keep no promises, they need not imagine that the rest of the country will adjust itself to their whims and varying moods. The rest of the country will arrange to get along without them, enduring whatever discomfort may be necessary in the process.
